John Campbell defends Crown elimination races

Hambletonian Society president said scrapping eliminations in favor of taking the highest-earning horses in the final kills entries, purses and dreams.

Hambletonian Society / Breeders Crown president John Campbell said Thursday that he's "a little tired of people taking shots" at the poor quality of Breeders Crown elimination races.

"It's okay to have criticism, but at least come up with something that's better," Campbell said, referencing suggestions that since Crown eliminations can be poor betting races they should be scrapped in favor of taking the horses with the highest earnings in the final.

Taking the top earners, "just doesn't work for us," Campbell said. "First of all, the entries would plummet and the purse would plummet… because you're taking that hope and dream away from a guy that has a horse that he's pretty sure is not going to be in the top 10 or nine money-earners to get in it… If you look back historically at the Breeders Crown, there are so many Cinderella stories, of horses coming out of nowhere to win a Breeders Crown. I think Bays Fella comes to mind right away, Sunset Warrior. And then, obviously, Beckhams Z Tam in Indiana and FiftyDallarBill in Indiana."

Critics of elimination races say drivers aren't as aggressive when they only need to get their horses into the final, not go all-out to win. That makes them tough races to bet.

"Some people feel they don't get the same shot when they bet their money," Campbell said. "My initial reaction to that is they are probably right, but you're betting (with knowledge) that it is an elimination race. From a racing standpoint, there's no way that you are going to get the same focus, aggressiveness and strategy in an elimination race going for $25,000 as you do in the final going for $500,000. It's just not going to happen, I don't care what incentive you have.

"You just can't make an elimination the same as you can a final. It's just not going to happen and you should bet accordingly."

Campbell, a Hall of Famer who has won more Crown races (48) than any other driver, said he was "a big-time offender of racing horses conservatively in elimination races" until rules changed to allow elimination winners to pick their posts for the final or receive an inside post.

"My strategy and whole mindset changed when they put that condition in that you would earn your post in the final or pick one or two or whatever," he said.

Still, he said bettors can't expect every horse to go full out in every start, especially in eliminations.

"When you have a campaign to get to the Breeders Crown, you just can't go all out every start," Campbell said. "So, certainly, the trainer's mindset and the driver's mindset is, 'If I can get a race that I don't have to really go to the bottom of my horse, it's going to benefit him especially the next week.' It doesn't mean that they are not trying, just that they are using more conservative parameters to try to win."

Campbell said there's a mechanism in place for any driver that gives a less-than-honest effort.

"It's called judges. I think they could certainly be more proactive when guys are racing close to that conservative line and not trying hard enough," he said.

After all, drivers should always know their horse's odds and drive accordingly, he said.

"I was always aware of my horse's tote price. I knew at 3-5, even if I didn't want to torture or race him as hard as I had to, you still wanted to give him a chance and show the public that you are giving him a chance or putting him in position where he can win. You just can't have the nine-hole and get away ninth at 3-5."

He said he finds it strange there was criticism of the 2018 Crown eliminations at The Downs at Mohegan Sun Pocono, when both nights posted handle higher than a typical night.

Besides, savvy bettors who choose to bet elimination races are well aware what they're getting into and use that as part of the handicapping equation.

"You know it's elimination racing going in," Campbell said. "With sports wagering coming in all over the place, it's going to be an issue with other sports as well... First of all, already, the last game of the NFL season that the Giants played, they played Dallas. The game meant nothing to Dallas because they had clinched the NFC East and they couldn't improve or lose their position, so it meant nothing to them. As a result, the Giants were favored by six. If the game had been meaningful for Dallas, Dallas would have been favored by three or four... That's the way Vegas handicapped it and you could bet or not bet. That's why it's called gambling."

As for the Breeders Crown, those that are complaining about the eliminations have the wrong focus, Campbell said.

"The primary focus is to make those final races as entertaining and as bettable and get as many people out to the track as possible for the finals. Your focus is not the eliminations," he said.

With no reasonable alternative, doing away with eliminations doesn't make sense to the Hambletonian Society.

My biggest sale blunders, thoughts on French horses and how horses adapt to noise

by Ron Gurfein

Tidbits: I have been inundated with emails about the races that horses trained by Nick Surick and Rene Allard are involved in at Yonkers. If you are finding fault with the system call track management or the judges, don't waste your time telling me stories because I am neither a judge nor a jury. Just because horses go faster in one race than another there is more to it than performance enhancing drugs. When money is involved it is common for players to push the envelope. In time the guilty will get caught, but we don't need hanging judges or vigilante juries. Proof of guilt is of the essence in these matters.

How about Clemson? Its Red Zone defense was so good I thought they had the plays before the snap. Their reaction to the fake punt was almost as if they knew it was coming. Who was more impressive, Trevor Lawrence or his receiving corps? What can we do to make him a Dolphin some day? Fabulous game.

Talk about great games, is it possible that the Eagles are God's team? How smart was the Philadelphia front office to keep both Carson Wentz and Nick Foles, who would have been a very valuable commodity to put on the trading block.

Congratulations to Yannick Gingras for win 7,000. You're almost halfway there.

Congratulations to Dan Noble for winning the North America Driving Championship at Miami Valley over Brett Miller.

Billy Bigler asks: We all know of some of the bargains you have picked up in your career, tell us about some of the errors.

There were plenty of them, too many to list in the column, but a few that stick in my throat I will relate. In 1972, I bought a Torpid colt out of Magda by Tar Heel from Pine Hollow Stud. I loved the colt and the pedigree and he turned out to have limited ability at best. The following year, Magda had a better looking foal that was awesome on the floor and I decided to take another chance on the family considering the new model was a Fulla Napoleon. As the bidding approached my budget, I kept thinking about that racky-gaited Torpid colt and I chickened out . The auctioneer knocked the colt down to Dale Ross, his name was Momentum and he won almost $500,000.

Also in the early seventies, and also from Pine Hollow, came two beautiful chestnut Romeo Hanover colts. I was very friendly with Paul Vance as he was a well known songwriter as was my father in law, Milt Kellem, and both were constant track goers. Paul's most famous song was Catch a Falling Star and Milt's was Gonna Get Along Without You Now, both very popular in my day. Paul and I kept going back to the barn and looking at the two colts, Qatar the Old Glory Yearling Sale at Yonkers Raceway. They both sold around the same price. I bought the first one Magic Kingdom and Paul the other, Secret Service. They trained well next to each other at the South Florida Training Center. My colt was hard pressed to break his maiden and won $32,000 lifetime, and Secret Service won $450,000.

Last and worst error ever I was at the Harrisburg sale in 1995 and I was looking at two Sierra Kosmos fillies that Dr Alexander of Pin Oak Lane Farm was selling. Every time I took the two fillies out of the stall, Dr Alexander would tell me "I raised those girls. I know which one is better." No matter how hard he tried to convince me, the filly he liked was a bit too masculine for my taste and rougher looking. Fool that I was, I didn't listen to the breeder (something I never did again) and bought the wrong horse. The filly was so bad I have a mental block on her name which is unimportant anyway as she was awful. The filly he did want me to buy was No Nonsense Woman, winner of $1,300,000. Can you imagine having No Nonsense Woman the year after Continentalvictory? Unfortunately, I messed up.

Steven Frank asks a question that was as long as a novelette. I apologize, but will paraphrase. Steven says I have been to tracks recently with very few patrons and I wonder when a horse is used to the quiet atmosphere at these venues what happens when he or she goes to The Little Brown Jug or a similar event?

Some horses will get a bit on the iron when there is a noisey crowd, but for the most part, a trainer can handle the noise by using ear plugs or a ear cup devise called a hood. I never found crowd noise a problem compared to the noises and sights at the tracks like Springfield and Duquoin with signs and rides and all sorts of goings on in the infield. What a colt sees is far more concerning than what he hears. Loudness might get a colt riled up where he wants to go right now, but a Tilt O Whirl in the first turn may frighten one into leaping over the hub rail. When I went on the western swing of the Grand Circuit I would always hit those tracks early to get the horses used to all the distractions. I even found the signs and sites at the Meadowlands disconcerting to 2-year-olds and being stabled on the ground gave me a great advantage over the shippers.

Neil Zelkin asks: The Internet has brought European racing to our doorstep. I love French racing. It is way more exciting than ours. Why don't we have 15-horse fields and distance races like they do? I also noticed something that confuses me why in France do they have so many races where all the horses in a given race have names that start with the same letter of the alphabet?

The French Trotting Association has kept a closed book on their breed. For all of the last century, they allowed no outside blood to enter their sport. Therefore, the type of horse they are breeding is very different from the American version. Our horses are finer and lack the ability to race long distances parked much of the time. It's almost like we raise sprinters and they raise distance routers. Our horses are severely inbred compared to theirs. If you attended a big race in France you could see the difference in the animal right away. Moni Maker, the last American horse to have success in France, was more on the order of a French horse than an American. She was big and strong and could go forever. Her son, International Moni, had many of those qualities and is from a stallion with European heritage, that is why he is being so well received as a new stallion in our country.

I agree with you wholeheartedly that we should at least attempt bigger fields and different distances, the trouble is we are so short of horses right now that this would be futile. In order to create excitement we need NEW. I have said many times in this column that elimination races are awful. Take the 15 top money earners and race — especially on a mile track. What is more exciting is that in the Prix d'Amerique 20 horses turn and go. Unfortunately, we are part of a sport that seems to defy change.

As for why horses have names starting with the same letter, it not only France, but many European countries that do that to signify the year of their birth. Those races are indigenous to horses bred in France in a certain year. They are restricted by age so when 3-year-olds race they have the same letter as with 4- and 5-year-olds, etc.

The races where they don't have the same letter are ones of open class horses where the conditions are for many ages and are usually for the better horses.

Thanks to all my readers for the kind words. Please keep the questions coming in as this is a slow time of the year for racing news. Have a wonderful week. Go Eagles.

Taking stock at Yonkers a year after big changes were implemented

by Brett Sturman

The start of the new racing season at Yonkers this week marks one year since the track began the 2018 season amidst changes designated to improve the racing product. Of these changes, the one most highly publicized and debated was the removal of the passing lane. It was believed that if the passing lane were removed it would force drivers to adopt a more aggressive racing style, thus providing a more watchable and bet-able style of racing, all the while leading to an increase in handle. With a full year now in the books, how did the track fare last year?

The metric above all used in determining the success of a track is handle, and last year handle at Yonkers was up considerably from the year prior. Especially in the first quarter of last year, handle went gangbusters at the track and it helped set the tone for the rest of the year.

Leveraging a ton of hype from changes made to the track, as well as exposure through TVG and free programs offered, Monday easily became the day of the racing week that Yonkers most capitalized on. In the first three months of the year alone, Monday handle averaged $827,000 in 2018 compared to just $428,000 for the same three months in 2017. The hot trend continued through May, when Yonkers was still topping an average $800,000 that month.

From there, however, the monthly Monday numbers leave a bit more to interpretation. Handle dropped nearly 20 per cent between May and June, and then remained more-or-less static through the rest of the year where it bottomed out at $473,000 for Mondays in November.

I suppose an argument could be made that from a seasonal standpoint, that as more tracks open back up in the spring and summer Yonkers handle will inevitably drop from increasing competition, but the same thing didn't happen in 2017. In that year — while handle was consistently lower than 2018, on a month to month basis — there was not a steady monthly decrease in handle the way that there was in 2018.

There are two ways one could look at this. Either handle was so low early in 2017 that it couldn't have possibly gone much worse no matter the circumstances, or maybe more likely, handle declined in 2018 as the early year hype faded away, though remaining far above the 2017 monthly equivalent.

Though increase in handle is the overarching goal, other changes were implemented that were designed to make races more competitive. In addition to the removal of the passing lane, the finish line was moved up in the stretch, with the intent to give outside horses more of a run at the start of a race before entering into the first turn.

From these track configuration changes, it does not appear the results are different with what is typically seen of half-mile tracks; passing lane or no passing lane.

As one would expect with any half-mile track, post 1 won the highest percentage of races, 18.1 per cent of the time throughout the year. Outside of the pole position, there isn't much change between posts 2 through 5 although there are a couple of noteworthy observations. For example, post 2 (15.6 per cent) actually wins less than posts 2, 3, 4 and 5, and at 17.2 per cent post 4 was the second highest winning percentage. The subtle differences though between the posts that come outside of the rail aren't unique to Yonkers, though. The same can be seen at Freehold, Monticello, and Northfield – all tracks with passing lanes – where it's annually common that a post 5 shows better numbers than a post 2.

The other post position statistics that has remained consistent is the fact that the outside starting horses still face a monumental hurdle to win races. Post 7 at Yonkers won just 6 per cent of the time last year and post 8 won only 4 per cent of the time. These numbers are nearly identical to half-mile post position outcomes at other tracks and that have existed since the beginning of half-mile racing.

Overall, favorites have been winning the last year at Yonkers at 43 per cent, which is a bit better from a competition standpoint than Freehold and Monticello as examples, where favorites win at 46 per cent. Again, it's hard to attribute that solely to track changes or perhaps it's simply a matter of more competitive races and horses at Yonkers than tracks with lower quality stock, but winning favorites do occur less at Yonkers than other half-milers.

Other changes have likely helped fuel the Yonkers handle gains, as well. Though post dragging is now the norm for all harness tracks, Yonkers has become the poster child for that practice. In line with the post delay perpetuity, Yonkers will only go off with a race when it doesn't have to share screen time with any other tracks with races in progress. This practice may drive a lot of people crazy, but more people are betting the product than before.

Ditto with the removal of the passing lane. I could argue from here to eternity about the need for the passing lane on half-mile tracks, but the numbers from bettors suggest otherwise. Evidently what people want is (debatably) more racing movement even if that means more horses being locked in through the stretch, and the big increase in handle bears that out.

Aided in part by its early-year numbers, Yonkers showed a massive near-50 per cent increase last year from 2017 on its Mondays alone. Whether or not the track can replicate those numbers this year remains to be seen, but it seems clear that Yonkers was successful in gaining a following last year that it lacked in years prior. Even if you don't agree with all the changes made, the results are doing the talking.

Last chance to get into the Prix d'Amerique

by Thomas Hedlund

The last B-race, the $135,000 Prix de Belgique, is by tradition scheduled two weeks before Prix d'Amérique. So, Sunday, Jan. 13 is an important date for those who want to reach one of the most prestigious races in the world.

The Prix de Belgique is held over 2,850 meters (approximately 1.8 miles) and 14 trotters will enter the race at Vincennes in Paris.

Last year's Prix d'Amérique winner Readly Express, trained by Timo Nurmos, finished second to Bold Eagle in the last B-race and Readly Express chases full and complete form in Sunday's Prix de Belgique, while Sébastien Guarato's Bold Eagle stays in his barn this time. Guarato still has four horses competing since Eridan, Carat Williams, Valko Jenilat and Billie de Montfort all are in the race.

Bazire's horses will not lose

Jean-Michel Bazire's stable has been running like nothing else in France this winter. On Thursday afternoon, Bazire sent his Bel Avis (Ganymede) to the French Riviera, to Cagnes-sur-Mer where the duo won the $135,000 Prix de la Cote d'Azur in a splendid mile rate of 1:56.3 over 1.8 miles.

Bazire's meeting in France this year is the talk of harness racing fans. The champion driver delivers winners in Paris almost on every race card and for Prix d'Amérique Bazire has three horses qualified. Davidson du Pont, Looking Superb and Belina Josselyn are all set for the great race and two of them will get the last preparation in Prix de Belgique on Sunday. Looking Superb was disqualified in a race at Vincennes last weekend.

Falco de Laurma wins Prix de Tonnac Villneuve

Four-year-old dominant Face Time Bourbon chased another victory as first choice in $115,000 Prix de Tonnac Villneuve at Vincennes last Sunday but Guarato's trotter couldn't defend himself when Thierry Duvaldestin-trained Falcao de Laurma (Uniclove) found an extra gear in the home stretch. Falcao de Laurma was placed outside leader Face Time Bourbon and it seemed like the favorite had everything under control in the last turn, but his opponent on the outside showed extraordinary qualities and disarmed Face Time Bourbon short before the wire.

The mile rate of 1:56 over 1.3 miles is a strong note for a 4-year-old this time of the season.

In monté race (racing under saddle) in the $150,000 Prix du Calvados over 1.8 miles, three horses were outstanding, which makes next week's upcoming $746,000 Prix de Cournulier more interesting. Traders, Billibilli and Briac Dark all impressed and Billibilli (Niky) was the one that got out of Prix du Calvados as a winner. The mile rate 1:56.2 over 1.8 miles is a new stakes record and Billibilli will be a serious antagonist to last year's Prix de Cournlier winner Traders on Sunday, Jan. 20.

CASH HALL T1:51.1h

Self Possessed-Chatty Hanover, by Super Bowl

Cash Hall sired the top two-year-old trotting colt in the Ohio program in 2017 from his first Ohio-sired crop of only 29 foals. That was Sultan Of Cash 2,1:57.1f, who won 7 of 8 starts and earned $126,515.

From his second Ohio-eligible crop, limited again to only 29 foals, Cash Hall outdid every other Ohio trotting sire with his two-year-olds in 2018. He had the best two-year-old trotting filly the Ohio program has ever seen in Only Take Cash. Trained and co-owned by Bob McIntosh, Only Take Cash won 8 out of 9 starts, finishing second in the only one she lost, taking a record of 1:56f and winning $272,140. She won the $275,000 Ohio Sires Stakes Final by 5 1/2 lengths.

But that wasn't all, by any means. Cash Hall also had one of the very best Grand Circuit two-year-old trotting colts in Chin Chin Hall, who took a record of 1:54.4 and earned $201,320. Among his wins was the $86,000 Bluegrass Stake at Lexington and an elimination of the classic Valley Victory, where he finished a close second in the $435,900 final.

Cash Hall stands at Cool Winds Farm, in Lima, Ohio, under the management of Walnut Hall Ltd. At his fee of $3,500, live foal, he is unquestionably the best trotting sire value Ohio has to offer.

Noble edges Miller to take the $25,000 North America Drivers Championship

by Jay Wolf

Driver Dan Noble has visited the winner's circle at Miami Valley Raceway 535 times since its opening in 2014. His latest trip to the enclosure came Jan. 8 without a horse as he hoisted the trophy and oversized check as champion of the 3rd Annual $25,000 North America Drivers Championship.

The native of nearby Xenia, OH used consistent efforts in the final round to edge Brett Miller to win the $10,000 first-place prize.

Eight preliminary rounds were held on Sunday and Monday, narrowing the field of 30 to the final 10. Points were awarded 30-20-14-11-9-7-5-3-1 for first through ninth place finishes. Scratched horses gained eight points.

Miller led fellow Ohioan Randy Tharps by three points after the first day. The eventual winner was in a tie for 12th.

"I had to regroup myself after the first day," said Noble. "I was really irritated at myself."

Noble won his first race on Monday with a pacer named Fudge and gained a valuable 30 points towards his second day total of 68.

After Monday's action, Miller (144 points) used three runner-up finishes from his four drives to retain the point's lead of the preliminary rounds, topping Jeremy Smith (136), Randy Tharps (122), Joe Bonjiorno (115), Dan Noble (114), Drew Monti (113), Aaron Merriman (106), Dexter Dunn (98), Anthony Napolitano (91) and Travis Henry (86).

Henry survived a random draw to get the final spot as there was five-way tie for 10th. Henry was tied with Simon Allard, Pat Berry, Shawn Gray and Chris Page.

The scores from the first two days were erased and the drivers all started with a clean scoring slate for Tuesday's championship round.

Miller strengthened his hold on the lead after romping to a 10 ¼ length win in the first race of the final round with The Optimist.

Noble scored his only final round win the next race, when Desire's Lady scored in 1:57.2 for trainer Art Gregory, Jr.

"I was just going off of what the trainer said," said Noble. "He said 'the filly should be good. She was trapped in her last two starts. Absolutely nowhere to go her last two starts.' The trainer said that if she gets out her last quarter, there is no reason she shouldn't win. That gave me some confidence."

In the fourth and seventh race of the event, Noble found himself in a unique position – competing against horses that he trains. Thanks to the blind draw, Drew Monti was given the duty to drive Cool Like That and Rusty Carter. Monti used Cook Like That to win a $10,000 claiming event.

"It was a little awkward not driving my own horse," admitted Noble. "I had to keep them in good form to race. If they were short, you don't want to hurt yourself twice."

As the championship headed into the 8th and final event, Miller led Noble by eight points and the top five drivers all had a mathematical shot at the title.

Noble drew Rockin Hot Lady from post #2. Miller was given Johnsbadgirl with the outside post #9.

"I already knew that horse. It was kind of 'do or die,'" said Noble. "I knew she really likes the front and I was hoping that I could keep Brett behind me."

When the field of 10 was sent away, Noble fired off the gates wings and grabbed the early lead. They controlled the pace and led until mid-stretch when Randy Tharps and Northernflightlady pulled away to win by 4 1/4 lengths. The win gave Tharps four wins during the competition.

With the second-place finish, Noble amassed 112 points to Miller's 100. Miller earned $5,000 for his efforts.

"It's the luck of the draw," said Noble. "I feel I had better horses this year than last two or three years."

Noble is the son of Ohio Hall of Famer, Sam Noble III.

"My father always told me 'drive for a check and you'll win more races by accident.' I hope I can keep it rolling. It could be another good year for me."

The winner's share was equivalent of winning a $400,000 stakes race.

So does the 35-year-old have any plans for the money?

"Nothing really," said Noble. "I really don't."

The annual event was also a challenge for the bettors. Of the 32 races in the NADC, only 7 (21.9 per cent) of the winners were betting favorites. The average win ticket for the event was $16.80. Henry steered Townlinedaliscard to a 4 ½ length victory in the fourth race on Monday, paying $67.90 to win.

John Polvinale honored with USHWA President's Award

by U.S. Harness Writers Association

John Polvinale, who started the Facebook page Harness Racing History to share his extensive collection of memorabilia and has curated it to grow into one of harness racing's most popular sites in the new technology, has been named the winner of a President's Award by U.S. Harness Writers Association head Shawn Wiles for the page's contribution to the knowledge and enjoyment of the sport by people both inside and outside of the sport.

Polvinale first went to the races at Roosevelt Raceway when the track's age was still in single digits, then furthered his knowledge on the backstretch of Freehold Raceway, where trainer "Big Mike" Petito urged him to purchase a horse named Steady New Yorker in 1979.

"In his first start for me, he went off at double digits, but he still won by eight lengths, with Jack Moiseyev driving. I thought this sport was going to be a piece of cake – which, of course, has not turned out to be the case," Polvinale said.

But the inevitable ups and downs of racing did nothing to deter Polvinale's enthusiasm for the game, with his love of history also leading him to assemble a large collection of harness-related materials, books, trophies – you name it. "I had started to watch race replays on the Internet and social media, and with the encouragement of friends who wanted me to share my collection, I decided to use these emerging media to start Harness Racing History."

Polvinale soon found that his new page had struck resonantly with many harness racing fans – and also with people with only a passing or little knowledge of the sport. "It started with people that I knew," Polvinale said, "but then those people talked to people in their own 'circles,' including those not in racing," and a "ripple effect" was soon evident, with those outside the sulky community finding items and people that interested them. Harness Racing History just broke the 30,000 "member" plateau, and in a given month will have 100,000 "engagements" (posts, comments, likes, views). The site's viewership is 60-40 male-female, and 60 per cent fall within the desired 25-54 age range demographic.

It was Polvinale who started the Facebook page, doing most of the early postings, and he still checks the site "about once during most of my waking hours," watching for any signs of commercialism or incivility, both of which are quickly eradicated. However, he is very proud that now "it's mostly the members, the visitors to the site, who have determined its 'shape,' and are the drivers of what appears on the website. We know of certain trends, say people who want to see the replays of certain races at certain times, but it's really our audience who are the content shapers with their postings and comments.

John Polvinale.

"One of the things that gives me the greatest satisfaction is that the site has become a place where 'family reunites' – people who haven't heard from another party for 20 or 30 years will see some experience they had in common and make a comment, and old friendships are reborn." Polvinale's catchwords for operating the site are "pure" and "simple," and those feelings resonate so much that when USHWA president Wiles told John of his winning the award, Wiles used those very words in congratulating Polvinale – "and it was evident he had captured the spirit of the site exactly."

John Polvinale will be honored at USHWA's annual Dan Patch Awards Banquet, celebrating the best and brightest of harness racing in the past year. The banquet honoring the champions of 2018 will be held on Sunday, February 24, 2019 at the Rosen Shingle Creek Resort in Orlando FL, the climax of a weekend that also finds USHWA holding its annual national meetings.

Tickets for the Dan Patch Awards Banquet are $175, with a filet mignon dinner featured; "post times" on Feb. 24 are cocktails at 6 p.m. and dinner at 7 p.m. Tickets, and other Banquet-related information, can be obtained through Dinner Planning Committee Chair Judy Davis-Wilson, at zoe8874@aol.com or 302 359 3630.

Hotel reservations for those attending can be made through USHWA's website, www.ushwa.org; a link to the hotel's computer is on the front page of the website.

Gingras wins 7,000th race during Yonkers 2019 opener

Yannick Gingras was so giddy Yonkers Raceway began its 2019 season Monday night (Jan. 7), he popped in and reached a driving milestone — career win number 7,000.

It took until the finale and odds-on fave Prologue ($2.90) lasting on the lead to get Gingras to the Promised Land, doing so by a diminishing nose in 1:53.2.

Gingras, who began the dozen-race dossier needing three wins to reach the plateau, made short work of the $7.50 early daily double, escorting romping public choices Roll with Jeff ($4.80) in the $13,000, first-race pace (1:56.1) and ABC Muscles Boy ($2.80) in the $10,000, second-race trot (1:58).

He then forced the rank and file to wait around until last call before receiving his gold star.

"I'm not a numbers guys in that regard. I had no idea that the (7,000) number was upcoming until right before Christmas when someone mentioned it to me."

The 39-year-old Gingras, a native of Greenfield Center, QC, has career earnings in excess of $169 million and more big-money wins than can listed here without writing this in missive in installments.

"To have it happen it here (Yonkers) where it all started for me coming down from Canada makes it special," Gingras said.

Gingras counts his win with Foiled Again in the 2009 final of the George Morton Levy Memorial Pacing Series here as one of his personal highlights.

"I don't know what else to say about him. He would get ready to begin his year in the Levy every season… just made for the half-mile (oval).

"In the last few years, I've been concentrating more on the stakes races. I had less drives (1,705) and had less wins (330) in 2018 than in about 15 years. This season, I'm committing to overnight racing, Yonkers Mondays and Thursdays, Meadowlands Fridays and Saturdays. Winning never gets tiresome. As Cat Manzi said to me, 'You're only one win away from happiness.'"

The 2019 World Harness Handicapping Championship presented by DerbyWars.com — offering a record $150,000 prize pool — has been pushed back a week to Saturday, April 13. The adjustment will ensure all partner outlets have enough time to run their qualifiers and allow players more time to buy-in.

The World Harness Handicapping Championship presented by DerbyWars.com is a one-day tournament with a welcome reception the evening prior. Players that did not earn a seat through a qualifying event can directly buy-in for $1,300. The $1,300 entry fee includes a $300 bankroll, with the remaining $1,000 going to the prize pool. The $150,000 prize pool is based on an estimated 150 entries. The WHHC contest format requires players to bet 10 races: their choice of seven Meadowlands races, plus three designated mandatory races. Players keep all pari-mutuel winnings. Prize payouts are to the Top 10.

This Saturday, Jan. 12 the Meadowlands has its next WHHC Qualifier. Four spots are up for grabs in the $400 Qualifier ($200 entry plus a $200 real-money bankroll). The format requires players to bet a minimum of $20 Win, Place, Show or any combination of WPS wagers on 10 Meadowlands races. Players can wager on more than 10 races if they so desire. Players can register on-site Saturday up until 7:15 pm.

DerbyWars will host regular online qualifiers for the WHHC every Saturday through March. Players can qualify for as little as $22. Complete DerbyWars Qualifier (list available here) information can be found at DerbyWars.com.

Club Hawthorne will be hosting 2 WHHC Qualifiers on Feb. 15 and 16 with three seats into the Championship. Details can be found at HawthorneRaceCourse.com/Contest.

TVG/4NJBets will host three WHHC Qualifiers (one each in January, February & March) with six total spots given away into the World Harness Handicapping Championship presented by DerbyWars.com.

Big M rings in 2019 with big business

Business was brisk at the Meadowlands as the 2019 racing calendar year kicked off last weekend (Jan. 4-5) at the mile oval with bettors pushing a little more than $5.6 million through the windows over the course of the two-card race week.

Wagering was almost identical on the pair of 13-race programs, with $2,831,028 bet on Friday before $2,856,661 in action was taken Saturday. The average handle per race was a strong $218,757.

The 50-Cent Pick-4, the track's signature bet, took in $106,836 in wagers Friday before Saturday saw $92,512 in action. For those handicappers sharp enough to use 27-1 shot Whittaker in Saturday's 11th race, the Pick-4 returned a handsome $4,393. The first three legs of the wager were taken by 'havable' 5-1, 8-1 and 6-5 shots, respectively.

The 50-Cent Pick-4 has a low 15 percent takeout and a guaranteed pool of $50,000. Free program pages are available at www.playmeadowlands.com and www.ustrotting.com.

Twenty-Cent Jackpot Super High-Five players have a pair of carryovers to shoot for Friday night, as the fifth race will begin with $22,265 in the hat while race 13 will have $26,504 to start.

'ORANGE' CRUSHES, 'HORNET' STINGS: Andy Miller, aka 'The Orange Crush', was the man on Saturday (Jan. 5) night, driving six winners on the program. Yannick 'The Green Hornet' Gingras won five times over the course of the weekend.

NFL FAN? GO TO THE BIG M: For National Football League playoffs lovers who love to bet the games, the Meadowlands is the place to be.

The track's FanDuel Sports Book will offer action on all of this weekend's divisional round with the first game kicking off Saturday (Jan. 12) at 4:35 p.m. with the Indianapolis Colts traveling to Kansas City to take on the Chiefs. Then, at 8:15 p.m., the Los Angeles Rams host the Dallas Cowboys.

On Sunday (Jan. 13) at 1:05 p.m., the Los Angeles Chargers travel to New England to play the Patriots while the late game (4:40 p.m.) has the New Orleans Saints hosting the defending Super Bowl champion Philadelphia Eagles.

SKIP LUNCH, GO TO PINK: On Friday (Jan. 11), a sumptuous Italian-themed buffet will be available in the Meadowlands' Pink restaurant during the live race card. The buffet is $29.95 and features all classic Italian dishes. Reservations can be made by calling 201-THE-BIGM.
