Cobalt Cheats May Still Be Tough to Catch

By Bill Finley

Though he has implemented tough rules that he hopes will deter trainers from using the illegal drug Cobalt, Meadowlands owner Jeff Gural said yesterday that combating use of the drug may not be easy.

On Wednesday, the Meadowlands announced that it was doing its own out-of-competition testing for the drug and had already banned two trainers whose horses showed to have excessive levels of Cobalt in their systems. The

Meadowlands has established a threshold level of four (4) times the standard deviation above the normal level of Cobalt, which does occur in the body naturally. Any trainer who has a horse test above that level will be banned from the Meadowlands and Gural's other two tracks, Vernon Downs and Tioga Downs.

According to the Meadowlands press release, the odds of a horse having a natural level of Cobalt in its system above the threshold the Meadowlands will allow is 10,000-1.

Dionne Benson, the Executive Director & COO of the Racing Medication and Testing Consortium, said that Cobalt is definitely a drug that can be used as a performance-enhancer.

"People believe is that it causes the bone marrow to stimulate more blood cells. It's not unlike EPO," she said.

Gural said he first became aware of Cobalt when hearing rumors that a trainer with a long list of violations on his record was offering to sell it to people. No racing state was testing for the drug, so Gural took samples collected by his investigator Brice Cote and sent them to a lab in Hong Kong, where the excessive Cobalt levels showed up. Yet, he doesn't believe he has solved the problem.

"The real problem is that this is a drug that disappears from the system very quickly," he said. "That makes it hard for us to pick it up. My guess is that with the two really bad cases where the trainers were banned their horse probably got this stuff a half an hour before we tested the horses. We were probably lucky to catch them."

Though it may difficult to nail anyone using Cobalt, Gural hopes that fear of getting caught will be enough to make trainers stop using it.

"One of the reasons I came out with the statement was, rather than trying to catch people, I want them to say to themselves 'I better not use this stuff if I want to race at the Meadowlands,'" Gural said. "Why run the risk that Brice Cote shows up at the wrong time, takes a sample and I am done? A trainer that can't race at the Meadowlands is in trouble."

According to the Meadowlands statement when an excessive amount of Cobalt is administered to a horse, it can be very harmful. When used in excess, the affects of Cobalt can be, but are not limited to: cardiovascular issues, potential nerve problems, thickening of the blood and thyroid toxicity.

"We are committed to providing the most integrity-driven product in harness racing," said Chairman Jeff Gural. "We set out on a mission when taking over The Meadowlands to not only provide our customers with that integrity-driven product, but to do what is best for the horse and for the industry. This threshold of Cobalt being implemented for horses competing at The Meadowlands, Vernon Downs and Tioga Downs is just one step toward achieving what we set out to achieve. If you are found to be giving your horses an excessive amount of this substance, you are not racing at any of our three racetracks, plain and simple. This is not about catching trainers that are cheating, this is about keeping our equine athletes safe and healthy and providing our betting public and all of our participants a product that is on a level playing field."

If Cobalt is indeed a problem in harness racing and no states are testing for it then it would stand to reason that, currently, trainers can use it outside of the Meadowlands

And You Thought It Was Cold Here
By Lucas Marquardt

The cold played havoc with schedules in the U.S. and Canada earlier in the week when temperatures plummeted into the single digits (Fahrenheit), too cold for man, beast or harness racing. On Tuesday, with temperatures in the range of 8 and 9 degrees on the eastern part of the continent, Monticello, Western Fair, Yonkers and Northfield all canceled.

In Alberta, sometimes they only wish it would get that warm for a night of harness racing.

At Northlands Park, they were likely having a good laugh at those of us who were complaining about the frigid temperatures that all but shut down the sport. At Northlands, brutal temperatures are not a problem, they are a way of life. They don't complain, they very rarely cancel. They just bundle up and go out and race.

© Gural - www.GuralOR.com/14176

"Unless there's a complete blizzard people here will still come out to the races," said local trainer Rod Starkewski. "It's winter. The only thing to do is to come out to the horse races or go to a hockey game."

With almost inhumane conditions a daily part of life during the winter in Edmonton, the track, the horsemen and the racing commission have gotten together to establish some guidelines. They will cancel anytime the temperature dips below -25 Celsius (-13F) or if the wind chill goes below -30 Celsius (-22F). Any warmer and it's a go.

"When it comes to temperature, you're dealing with the health and safety concerns of horses and people," said Northlands General Manager Chris Roberts. "At -25 you're at the point where exposed flesh will freeze in 10 minutes. Horses handle it better, but they're exercising, so their lungs are handling a lot of cold air. Under the advice of veterinarians, their advice is that racing below -25 can be hazardous. Our number one concern is safety."

When you might have a night when you are racing at -24 Celsius that causes obvious problems, one of which is keeping the drivers warm. Starkewski said they do their best to stave off the cold.

"The drivers here are tough," he said. "They wrap themselves up in gear similar to what the football players wear, lots of Under Armour. With the gloves, there's not much to them because you have to have a feel for the lines and a feel for the horses. The gloves have to be pretty fine."

The conditions also affect the horses.

"What we found is that you need a warm paddock to keep the horses loose," trainer Rod Hennessy said. "Because in a short post parade, and when it's 25 below, you don't get a chance to loosen the horses up. We try to keep the paddock warm and will keep three blankets on them. I do a lot of work on their throats after they race. When it's that cold their throats get irritated."

"It affects them, it takes more out of them," Starkewski said. "They are a little more tired the next days. We notice they crash."

Northlands canceled on Dec. 6 and 7 when the wind chill both days dipped below 30 below. A week later, it dipped down to -24.6 (-12 Fahrenheit), cold but warm enough to race. Roberts said there is little humidity in Edmonton, which helps make the extreme cold bearable.

"We get used to it," Starkewski said. "I know that's hard to believe. The first couple of days that you get weather like this it can seem chilly, and then you get used to it and you are fine."

Racing resumes tonight at Northlands. The weather forecast is calling for a high of 31 (Fahrenheit). At Northlands, they have a phrase for that: heat wave.

Northfield to Offer $500,000 Carl Milstein Memorial

Northfield Park has announced the creation of the $500,000 Carl Milstein Memorial to be raced on Friday, Aug. 15. The Milstein Memorial is an early-closer for 3-year-old-colt-and-gelding pacers. Northfield will add $250,000 to the purse, for an estimated $400,000 Final and a $100,000 Consolation. The top eight purse earners in 2014 that enter will make up the field for the final, with the next eight drawing into the consolation.

The race will fill a big hole left on the harness racing calendar when it was announced that the battle of the Brandywine for 3-year-old male pacers was among three major races dropped from the schedule in Pennsylvania.

Carl Milstein owned and operated Northfield from 1984 until his death in 1999. His son, Brock Milstein, took over as Chairman of Northfield Park upon his passing and is now the Chairman of Milstein Entertainment, LLC, majority owner of the Hard Rock Rocksino and Northfield Park.

The rich Milstein Memorial is a direct result of the recent addition of a slots casino at Northfield. The announcement of the race comes less than one month after the opening of the $265,000,000 Hard Rock Rocksino.

Three New Living Horse Hall of Fame Members Announced (press release)

The Living Horse Hall of Fame nominating committee of the Harness Racing Museum & Hall of Fame has announced the results of recent balloting to determine the 2014 inductees into the Harness Racing Living Horse Hall of Fame.

Annual members (in good standing) voted for the two horses they felt best exemplified greatness. Their choices are racehorses Donato Hanover and Precious Bunny. The other nominees were Fool's Goal, Real Desire and SJ's Photo. Also entering the Living Horse Hall of Fame in 2014 will be broodmare Hattie, having met the required criteria for induction (see below).

Donato Hanover, Precious Bunny and Hattie will be inducted on Hall of Fame Day, Sunday (July 6). The ceremonies honoring these extraordinary Standardbred horses will take place during the Harness Racing Museum & Hall of Fame's annual dinner. For information on the Hall of Fame weekend and other festivities surrounding this important occasion visit <http://www.harnessmuseum.com/> or call or write the Museum at 240 Main Street, Goshen, NY 10924. Phone: 845.294.6330.

Super Bowl Underway – Miller Wins 6

Dave Miller appreciated the return to Thursday night racing as he scored six wins on the card. Two of those wins came in the Super Bowl Trotting Series which got underway tonight.

The first of the Buckeye "Super Bowl" triumphs was Donatella Hanover, sent off an even money favorite, she ranged up on the outside into the final turn, swooped to the lead and trotted strongly through the stretch to score in 1:55.3 for trainer Jimmy Takter. Donatella Hanover is owned by Christinatakerandthekids. Miller's "other" score in the trotting series came with Ray Hall, who broke in his previous start but had no such trouble tonight leading from start to finish in 1:54.4 and winning by just over one length. Ray Hall is owned by Bruce & Patricia Soulsby and The Wall Bros. Stable.

Earlier on the card, Home Turf took his division of the Super Bowl by one length, holding off Cocotier in 1:56 for John Campbell. Trained by Co-Owner Noel Daley for Mirva Bogucki.

The most impressive winner in the first round of the Super Bowl trotting series was Time To Quit. Patiently handled by Yannick Gingras, Time To Quit moved smoothly to the lead on the far turn, opened up willingly in the stretch and was wrapped up coming to the wire, holding off Dough Dough in the process. Time To Quit appears as the horse to beat in the series for Burke Racing Stable, Weaver Brussemi LLC and Philip Collura, trained by Ron Burke. Round Two of the Super Bowl will be contested Thursday, January 16th with the final set for Wednesday, January 22nd.

Live Handle showed a 23-percent increase compared to this same night last year, while the export yielded a

21-percent increase, resulting in a total handle increase of 21-percent over 2013

Western Fair and Other Ontario Tracks Are Trying Out New Models

On Friday January 7th 2011, Western Fair brought in a nightly handle of $108,640 and gave out close to $70,000 in purses. Last Friday evening they handed out a similar $70,000 in purses, but garnered a handle of $531,000. That was the highest handle night at the oval in over a decade.

This has been going on for some time in London, Ontario.

"Our overall handle has been up for the first three full months of the season. [We] just finished looking at December's numbers today. Overall handle is up 12% for the month despite three fewer programs (14 vs. 17 last year). We've topped $400,000 in handle four times in the last six programs which is a pretty good run for a track of our stature," said Western Fair District's General Manager Greg Blanchard.

The $400,000+ numbers are especially impressive when you realize that the little London track did not even garner more than $400,000 in handle for their Molson Pace cards in years past, where well over a half a million dollars in purses were raced for.

After slots were cancelled in Ontario in early 2012, a "Transition Panel" made up of three government appointees started to examine ways in which horse racing could be self-sustaining. One of those obvious tactics was to increase handle. The easy back of the napkin example - which is a problematic (the pie is split many ways and it depends on where the bet is made), but salient metric - is that 20% of the handle [the takeout] must, at the very least pay for purses. One might think this is common sense, but that does not happen very often in harness racing, in Ontario, or almost anywhere.

Just this week, the USTA released purse and handle figures for harness racing in the US for 2013. $1.6 billion was wagered throughout the year, and $422 million was given out in purses. On the back of that same napkin, $1.6 billion in wagering resulted in $320 million in revenue. Purses were not paid for by betting dollars.

In Ontario (with slots) at many tracks this number was much worse. In the Western Fair example above from 2011, $70,000 in purses resulted in only $21,000 of revenue from that $108,000 in handle. At small tracks like Woodstock Raceway, this number was unfathomable. I picked a random Friday card on a summer day in 2011 and saw that $60,000 in purses were raced for, with a handle of $4,817. That's spending $60,000 to get back $964. Clearly that was not able to be sustained without slot machines.

Fast forwarding to today, the smaller tracks have been eliminated for the most part, and tracks like Western Fair were challenged to succeed. Last Friday, with our 20% calculation, $106,000 in revenue was achieved from wagering, with $70,000 in purses. If we surmise that it costs $25,000 to put on such a racecard, the costs ($95,000) are lower than the revenue ($106,000). Three years ago this was impossible to achieve.

Of course, much of this growth is coming from off track or internet wagering and that is an issue, so you cannot in any way say racing is "making a profit", however the effects are noticed regardless.

"The off-track gain is very encouraging as more people are supporting the product. The improved pool size seems to have a snowball effect and even our on-track crowd is becoming more aware of this and are playing the local product more", noted Greg.

The "snowball effect" is something not lost on visionaries like Chris Schick, who helped create the USTA's Strategic Wagering Initiative. A lot of non-bettors do not know how punishing small pool size is. For example, when making a pick 3 bet, it is mathematically and fundamentally wrong to bet more than the parlay. No gambler worth his salt would even think of it. With a pool of $4,000, you cannot choose horses at more than 13.45-1 and hope to make a sound gamble. How many harness tracks have pick 3 pools over $4,000? One or two. At small tracks like Western Fair, these pools are a fraction of that. Racetracks were selling a $100,000 purse steak, and delivering raw hamburger. Pool size, through guarantees and low takeout are a staple at Western Fair and this has begun to be branded. Their pick 4 pool, which once struggled to receive even $3,000 in handle, now approaches quadruple that number. Pool size matters and handle begets more handle.

"Our team is trying to keep that ball rolling by focusing on things like full fields, competitive racing, a consistent product and an attractive wagering menu. It creates a buzz around the place when you see numbers like put up last Friday - everyone from customers to staff to judges to horse people are excited to be a part of it. There are many small things you can do to drive handle and increase wagering and you really need all of these groups working together to make it happen," said Greg.

In addition to Western Fair, other small tracks have begun to follow the same path, like Grand River Raceway. They lowered takeout last season and created some buzz. Their handle was up appreciably, and it gives them something to build on. Both Western Fair and Grand River have clearly gained from the fact there is less competition for live racing in the Province too.

Perhaps the most interesting model currently being examined in Ontario is the live model. Leamington Raceway was approved for a handful of cards in 2013 as an experiment. They raced for $1,000 per dash, and promoted the heck out of it in the community. With no simulcast, just on-track betting, they achieved over $40,000 in handle. At a 20% rake, that was close to paying for the purses for the day. That might not sound like much, but when racetracks show government revenue and buzz around an event, the government is more apt to be helpful. I don't think that can be overstated.

Despite the above numbers, this is certainly not a feel-good article. Racing in Ontario, when compared to what it was two years ago, is a shadow of itself from a horsemen and horse ownership point of view. Breeding, obviously, has been decimated. However, there are positive signs that the product itself, especially when amalgamated with government support, just might have a future. Twenty-four months ago I think you could count on one hand how many people thought that was even remotely possible.

MARTY PARTY drops and even though she lands the worst of it at the post draw she ought to be good enough to rebound against these. Classy 5-year-old sees her lowest level of competition in quite some time; I'd be very surprised if she isn't gunning from the start. SO NICE qualified impressively and makes her first start for Sisco; likely to be coming from off the pace in just her first start back and as an older mare. CHEYENNE MIRIAM exits a race that has seen its first two finishers go on to compete at the highest levels here; she's developed into a top mare for Siegelman. STAGE IT RIGHT jogged last week against slightly lesser and now takes the next logical step; I wouldn't be so quick to discount in a field that looks like lots of early speed from the outside.

Race 8, B-2 Trot

DEADLIEST CATCH debuts as a 4-year-old and this was a very talented sophomore last year that raced admirably against the best in his division. Duer qualified and puts down Pierce right away; could be ready at first asking following layoff. Mc TINYS HOPE steps up after destroying weaker. VIPER BLUE CHIP makes his first start in over a month; Burke horse should offer some type of price in here. TWIN B SPIKEMAN hacked it first over last week against a front end Burke winner and now lands the rail. HERE COMES NUMBERS drops back to the level of his last win here on 12-13. SHEENA'S SHADOW sported a solid late brush last out.

Race 9, F&M C-2 Pace

LOVE YOU ALWAYS is obviously a different mare now with Cushing than she was when we knew her here last year with Robinson, but this is a rather blank looking group and this one still looks best. The winner of her most recent would crush these; looks solid in third start back from the layoff. CRUISE QUEEN rates a look in here if for no other reason than the connections; closed in :27:3 last out when coming from post 9. BAD FEELING at least showed some speed last out in a race where she garnered some attraction; likely to be going forward early. GORDYYY'S PET has seen her stock fallen in recent months but raced well here a number of times last year; she can land a share.

Race 10, C-1 Trot

POINTE OF HONOUR takes a key drop and he surprised here last season with a fast 1:53 win. He's better than his most recent and should be put in play at some point at a price. FRISKY STRIKE goes second start for Burke but might be tough to improve much off Allard. RIVERFEST sports three straight seconds the last times he was seen at this level. LITTLE BITTY LIES was somehow favored against Sweet Justice a couple back and prior to that picked up a check against Bee A Magician; she'll have to go a bit quicker than she did in her most recent win here. MR FENWICK shouldn't have been favored when last seen but that race two back where he closed in :27:4 does warrant him a look in this spot. He's capable of early if pilot wishes; expect it. TIGERS TOO GOOD has been here before; needs a flat mile.
