HRU Tours France's Magnificent Grosbois Training Center

By Lucas Marquardt

BOISSY-SAINT LEGER, France--In the town of Boissy-Saint-Leger, about 11 miles southwest of Paris, there is a long, battered six-foot concrete wall running alongside a busy avenue. Scrawled with graffiti, the condition of the wall belies the two things it separates: a pleasant Paris suburb, and the Grosbois Trainer Centre, a huge, bucolic equine Shangri-la that is home to some 1,500 horses.

Two of the some 1,500 equine residents of Grosbois (Lucas Marquardt photo)

On a normal day, some of the best trotters in France are based here. This weekend, it's some of the best in the world, with a good number of the contenders for the Prix d'Amerique bedded down at Grosbois.

Le Trot's Damien Beau led a tour Friday morning of the center, which from above looks like it should be part of the Nazca lines--the ones in Peru some people like to think are alien landing strips. From the ground, it seems like an endless maze of paved roads and dirt paths; but aerial shots show a carefully planned network of interconnecting roads that form a web of triangles and diamonds.

The center has two primary tracks, each with a smaller jogging track situated inside. At the first track we stopped at, horses did their speed work clockwise, while those warming up or out for a light blow trotted counterclockwise. Horses come to the track down a broad tree-lined avenue.

Horsemen here have a huge range of options. In addition to the tracks, there are a number of wood-chip and grass paths to traverse, and if the weather's really lousy, there's a small covered track, too.

Brick-and-plaster stables, with steep, pitched roofs and dormers, give everything an unmistakably French feel, as did the workers who tacked up their horses with cigarettes dangling coolly from their lips. To top it off, a French bulldog and several of his friends ingratiated themselves into our group. The Frenchie was so enamored with his that, after trying to board the bus, Beau had to haul him back to rightful place in the world.

Grosbois is also home to the Musee du Trot, which celebrates the history of the trotter in France. The first known trot races were held in France on Sept. 25-26, 1836, at the Polygone naval artillery base in Cherbourg, but racing was conducted at least three decades before, historians believe.

Situated in a 16th-century chateau, the museum introduces visitors to some of France's all-time greats, including Uranie, the "first queen of Vincennes." A winner of 47 races from 1926 to 1930, Uranie won the Prix d'Amerique three consecutive years, from '26-'28. (And that's not a record, incidentally. The great Ourasi won it four times, from '86-'88, and again in '90.)

How good was Uranie? In the 1930 Prix d'Amerique, she was imposed with a 75-meter handicap.

The museum also credited an influx of American stallions to a smaller, lighter, faster trotter in France, an influence felt particularly in the 1970s.

As we left Grosbois, Beau told me that the centre opened in 1965, and hasn't been closed a single day since. If you're ever in Paris, it's certainly worth a visit.

Paris Diary-Day Two

By Lucas Marquardt

"American! It is the eight horse!"

My new French friend, seeing me walk by, waved me over and pointed to his racing form with gusto. "See? Third here...third here...and now is time for the win."

Leaning in, slightly disheveled and unshaved, he was showing me the horse had finished third in his last two races.

Horseplayers at Vincennes trying to dope out a winner

"And Nivard drives?" I asked.

"Ah, you know Franck Nivard in America!"

I didn't, really, just the name and that he was very successful here, and that he'd won consecutive renewals of the Prix d'Amerique ('11-'12) with Ready Cash.

"Nivard is very good! And Bazire?? Do you know Bazire in America?"

I actually did know Bazire, only because Jean-Michel had steered Moni Maker to victory in the Prix d'Amerique in 1999.

I went to the windows, put €20 on the 8 horse, and watched as he trotted home an even fifth. My French friend grinned and shrugged. Unfazed, he began again, "And TAKTER! You have the Swede!"

It was my first day at Vincennes, and I was exploring the track and each of its betting windows with varying degrees of success. My biggest score of the day actually came at Meydan, Dubai's Thoroughbred track, but watching the action at Vincennes live was more interesting.

There were eight races on the card, ranging from distances of 2,100 meters to 2,875 meters. Two were trotting races under saddle, the rest traditional races with sulkies. All starts are via volt; that is, there is no moving starting gate; horses and drivers gather in an area just off the track, then fan out across the track in a manner that's surprisingly well coordinated.

The track itself is broad and black, the surface looking more like volcanic rock than anything. (I asked a few people about the surface make-up; nothing definitive yet.)

There is an outer oval at Vincennes, slightly irregular in shape, with a mild incline from the top of the stretch to the wire, and then a more substantial dip to the first turn. A smaller oval sits inside, so that depending on the distance of the race, the track is reconfigured and part of that oval is incorporated (though the stretch and finish line always remain the same).

The grandstand is good-sized, reasonably modern in design and without much so many bells and whistles on the inside. Massive steel supports run the length of the structure's center, allowing for a huge open space, five stories high, on the grandstand's backside. Here, there are betting windows, a few large TVs, a gift shop and an area where you can learn how to bet (Jouer c'est super facile!)

Most of the horseplayers, at least on this day, kept to the front part of grandstand, standing around high tables and flicking losing tickets to the ground. There was a place to get coffee, beer, wine, sandwiches and deserts, but the main restaurants located upstairs were closed, the chairs still hoisted on the tables in most sections. was Nivard 1, Lucas 0 (for Vincennes, at least), and the French friend, I have to assume, also at 0. To be honest, I wasn't gleaning a whole lot from the free printed broad sheet listing the horses and some basic information, and was just betting on how the horses were moving in the post parade. Two horses caught my eye--the 2-1 favorite, and an 11-1 longshot. After a day of getting burned I was just looking for a score....any score. I put my money down on the chalk. The drama ended early when the tote flashed that he'd broken and been disqualified; the 11-1 swooped to lead at the top of the stretch and won comfortably. The winner's name? Barack. Sorry, America.

Maven 50-1 for Prix d'Amerique

Paris Turf lists US invader Maven as a 50-1 outsider for Sunday's Prix d'Amerique in Paris. The 7-2 favorite in the 18-horse field is Up And Quick at 7-2. The second choice is Texas Charm at 5-1. Hanover-bred Solvata is 40-1.

Lewis Remains in Limbo at Meadowlands

By Bill Finley

Trainer Doug Lewis still cannot enter horses at the Meadowlands, a ban that began shortly after the Dec. 27 card. The Meadowlands has had little to say about Lewis and his situation but HRU has learned that the New Jersey Racing Commission is investigating the death of a horse named Bad To The Bone, who was entered to race on the 27th but passed away beforehand.

Track owner Jeff Gural said he is waiting on the outcome of the New Jersey Racing Commission's investigation before he decides whether or not Lewis will be allowed back.

Lewis has not returned repeated phone calls from HRU, but his attorney Howard Taylor confirmed that the horse died, but insists the state and the Meadowlands has no case against the trainer. He said after the horse died no autopsy was done and the body has been cremated.

"Yes, the horse died but he was not insured, so why do an autopsy?" Taylor said. "Nobody looked at the horse at all. The state didn't even know about it but I guess it was (Meadowlands investigator) Brice Cote's issue and he told them about it. I was told the horse died in Delaware, that he was sick for a couple of days before and then died. Where are they going with this? That's my question. I don't believe anything was done wrong (by Lewis), but even if something did happen what are they going to do? Horses die all the time. Unfortunately it happens."

One of the horses Lewis started that night, Major Uptrend, was subsequently transferred to Ron Burke and has been racing at the Meadowlands. He will be among the favorites in tonight's finals of the Escort Series. Major Uptrend is owned by Taylor.

C-2 Trot with a purse of $8,000. He has not won since June 7, 2013, in a race at Pocono Downs. Can this really be the only horse to ever beat the great Muscle Hill?

You have to go way back in time to find the race but Homer Jay once did something incredible. On July 3, 2008, Homer Jay defeated Muscle Hill by a neck in a $175,000 New Jersey Sire Stakes race at the Meadowlands. For Muscle Hill, it was his first pari-mutuel start, and he never lost again. Muscle Hill became a superstar. He never lost again, winning his next 20 starts. Homer Jay became the answer to a trivia question.

Then trained by Ray Schnittker, Homer Jay's only win as a 2 year old was the one over Muscle Hill. He won one of 12 starts at three before having a decent year as a 4-year-old, making $119,292. From there, it's been all down hill. He has bounced around from trainer to trainer, none of whom have been able to get the horse to anywhere near the level he was the day when he beat Muscle Hill.

The now 9-year-old gelding by Muscles Yankee, also the sire of Muscle Hill, is now trained by Rob Harmon, who picked him up after loss 36. He was not even aware that the horse had beaten Muscle Hill.

"He's a nice horse, a good looking horse and has a nice way off going," Harmon said. "I just don't know if all the speed is there. He trots in 56 at the Meadowlands for me. He's just an average horse to me. He seems sound. He does everything right and he doesn't make breaks. He doesn't do anything wrong. I wish I could come up with something to tell you."

Harmon said that when Homer Jay is training he acts like a better horse than his record indicates.

"If you looked at him on paper and then sit behind him it seems like there are two different horses," he said. "When you sit behind him he feels like a good horse; on paper, he doesn't look like a good horse."

Harmon said he's hoping to race Homer Jay in the future at Yonkers, where he thinks it will be easier for a horse like him to pick up checks. For more than a year-and-a-half, the occasional check is all anyone has gotten out of Homer Jay, but Harmon said it's not time to give up on him.

"He's ok, it's not like he's Amish bound," he said. "I think we can definitely do better with him than they did last year."

State of Delaware Looking to Bail Out Tracks

Delaware's struggling racinos may soon be getting a shot in the arm. According to a report on wdde.org a state commission is prepared to give the racinos tax breaks that could add up to as much as $45.8 million. There are three racinos in the state, at the harness tracks Dover Downs and Harrington Raceway and at the thoroughbred track Delaware Park. With increased casino competition in neighboring states all three have been hit with hard times. To read the story click here

Filion Sweeps Series Finals

Courtesy Of Woodbine Entertainment

TORONTO, ON – The first two stake finals of 2015 took place Friday night at Woodbine Racetrack and it was the Sylvain Filion show.

The veteran reinsman could be poised for another big year, as he took home both the $45,000 Snowshoe Series and $40,000 Blizzard Series finales.

The Snowshoe Series final appeared to be wide-open on paper, as seven different horses won divisions during the first two legs.

Kindofabigdeal takes the first of two Snowshoe Series

Kindofabigdeal and Filion came into Friday's final as the most consistent horse in the ten-horse field and left with another big effort.

The Richard Moreau trainee got the cue to leave hard from Filion and sprinted out to the quick lead, but was quickly challenged for the front by A Boy Named Suuzz.

Filion allowed the outside challenger to clear and got a perfect two-hole trip for Kindofabigdeal.

Kindofabigdeal sat patiently in the pocket until Filion made his move at the top of the lane.

In the stretch, Kindofabigdeal overtook the lead by the eighth-pole and paced away to win in 1:53.3. Bad Bug came on late to make it close and finish second by half a length, while A Boy Named Suuzz held on to hit the board in third.

A four-year-old son of No Pan Intended, Kindofabigdeal has been on a roll over the last few months at Woodbine, but has recently been unable to come through in series finals.

The Moreau trainee won a leg of the Autumn Series, but finished second in the November final. Last month, Kindofabigdeal won the opening two legs of the Valedictory, but finished third as the favourite in the Boxing Day finale.

The series final victory Friday gives the pacer seven career wins from 13 starts and pushes his bankroll over $88,000 for owner Hudson Standrbrd Stb Inc.

Kindofabigdeal paid $5.70

Artistic Fusion in 1:54.4

In the Blizzard Series final, heavy favourite Artistic Fusion completed the series sweep with a 1:54.4 victory.

Trained by Joe Agostino, Artistic Fusion and Filion got away in fourth and came first up down the backstretch to challenge the leader A Fearless Affair.

Those two mares would battle side-by-side past the three-quarter pole in 1:25.2, but Artistic Fusion was too much to handle for A Fearless Affair in the lane.

Artistic Fusion wasted no time leaving her rivals behind and cruised home to win by 2 ¾ lengths. Badlands Love got up for second, while A Fearless Affair dug in to finish third.

A four-year-old daughter of Artistic Fella, Artistic Fusion has been firing on all cylinders over the last few months in series action.

The Agostino trainee won the Autumn Series final in November, finished second in the Niagara Series final on Boxing Day and has now swept the Blizzard Series.

Artistic Fusion surpassed the $100,000 mark in career earnings with her eighth career win Friday night for owner Mike Foote.

She returned $2.60 to win.

Somwhereovrainbow Comes Back In Style

By Darin Zoccali

Somwhereovrainbow made her five year old debut a winning one as she triumphed in the $30,000 Free-For-All Handicap at The Meadowlands on Friday Night.

Sent off as the 3/5 favorite, Somwhereovrainbow was sent hard off the gate by Dave Miller and cleared the lead heading toward the opening quarter without any urging. Essentially, that was the end of the race as the World Champion and millionaire would coast through fractions of 27, 55.2 and 1:23.1 before turning for home with an ever-expanding lead. Breeders Crown winner, Monkey On My Wheel, made a brief bid, but tired first over. Southwind Serenity offered minimal response off cover. The only horse to make any noise in the stretch was For The Ladies N, who rallied from last to finish second with Icommandmyspirit getting up to be third. The final clocking was 1:50.4. For Somwhereovrainbow, the win marked the 20th time the magnificent mare has made the trip to the winners circle from 45 starts, sending her earnings past $1.34 Million.

Somwhereovrainbow is trained by Joe Holloway for owners Theodore Gewertz and Diamond Creek Racing.

Hill I Am got back to his winning ways in the fifth race, a $17,050 non-winners of three trot. Sent off as the 9/2 third choice in the wagering, Hill I Am was aggressively moved to the lead heading to the half-mile pole and proceeded to lead the charge around the far turn. Candy Stash made a first over move after the leader, but Corey Callahan could be seen looking over his right shoulder as the field approached the top of the stretch, seemingly looking around for competition. As the field straightened up, Callahan called to his trotter and the response was instant as Hill I Am powered away to win impressively by nearly five lengths in 2:10.2 for the 1 1/8th miles. Hill I Am was an undefeated New Jersey Sire Stakes Champion as a two year old for Dennis Laterza and Roy Dobbins who were the winning connections tonight.

Tim Tetrick was the driving star on the night, winning four races.

The fifth race jackpot super hi-five was hit tonight and returned $47,172.50 for $.20 cents. That pool will start fresh on Saturday night.

The last race jackpot super hi-five went unclaimed and will feature a carryover into the 13th race on Saturday of $61,470.

The win by Hill I Am sparked a Pick 5 carryover of $22,616 into The Saturday card at The Meadowlands. Post Time and the start of the Pick 5 which begins in the first race is 7:15 P.M.

Sboanj & Gural Agree to Changes at Meadowlands

By Carol Hodes (SBOANJ)

MANALAPAN, NJ – Standardbred Breeders & Owners Association of New Jersey President Tom Luchento and Meadowlands Chairman Jeff Gural met Friday, January 23, 2015 and agreed to withdraw the trainers' rewards program and suspend ABC classification racing at the Meadowlands.

"We have always been willing to explore any strategy that would bring about the best possible racing at the Meadowlands," said Luchento. "Until we have slots revenue, which I feel is not far off, we have to be responsive and creative to whichever concepts will fill the entry box and provide the full, competitive fields that are the hallmark of the Meadowlands. Director of Racing Peter Koch will be issuing his condition sheets to reflect the return to condition racing."

"We hope these changes are reflective of both the needs of the trainers and race office," Luchento added. "The SBOANJ and the Gural team are partners in making the Meadowlands a success and look forward to a return to the glory days of harness racing in East Rutherford."

The trainers' rewards program was a preference system instituted in 2014 to provide preferences to trainers who supported the spring and summer racing programs.

Brett Sturman's Meadowlands

Pick 4 Analysis

Race 7, Escort Final

JK PATRIOT makes his fourth start for Toscano since the barn change and each race has been better than the one before it. This one showed a strong brush last week to the front end through a :54:3 half and was excellent two back against Company Man; I'd expect early speed. MAJOR UPTREND made an uncharacteristic break and he's been one of the more talked about horses here early in the year following the stable move from Doug Lewis to Ron Burke; his best would likely be more than enough. COMPANY MAN was a winner in his Meadowlands debut two back and then had a tough first over trip last week at the added distance; the rail will give Tetrick some options. WHAT I BELIEVE is slated to pick up Pierce tonight and certainly rates a shot; KHAN BLUE CHIP has been consistent too and may go overlooked.

Race 8, C-1 Pace

GAMBLER'S TALE was Pierce's pick of a few in here and this is certainly a winnable spot after sporting last quarters of :26 and change in back to back races. He was rallying right with Ashley's Husband last week and may only need to be within striking distance; will be moving forward late. SAMANDAR exits the same race as the top choice and he was the victim of a shuffle after showing early speed that night; obvious contender but I don't recall him winning too often at this track. PANCHESTER UNITED had a ton of late pace to offer when he was last seen here three races ago for trainer Andrew Harris and is a possible longshot candidate. ALLTHATGLTRSISGOLD has a load of back class and will try to make his way back up the ladder after beating a C-2 group in his most recent; that was a fast time and he makes his fifth start in the new barn. MISTER VIRGIN has been firing in every recent race but hasn't found that winning knack.

Race 9, B-2 Pace

LONEWOLF CURRIER had come into decent form towards the end of December and still might be deceptively sharp despite three consecutive sixth place tries. Tetrick opts here over #1 and now he moves almost all the way inside in his second try at the reduced level; didn't have the easiest trip in his last. ASHLEY'S HUSBAND swept last out against weaker and now makes his third start off the layoff; that :26:4 final quarter from last week suggests he can handle the step up. You don't see many winning trips like the one SASSY HANOVER came up with last out, that was visually impressive. He goes from non-winners to this class and I think it says a lot that TT chose off a Toscano trainee. ONTARIO SUCCESS makes his first start since September for O'Sullivan but was a monster at times here last winter. GOLD ROCKS was better last out and should be coming from off the pace again.

Race 10, C-1 Pace

VOICE OF TRUTH has now had three no shot drives in a row and gets a driver change tonight to Callahan; this is a level we all know that he can do some damage in. OK COMMANDER was one that I liked last out and unfortunately ran into all sorts of traffic issues and ended up just missing by a length; chance to make amends from the rail. IDEAL MAGIC ran into a hurricane a couple weeks ago when his C-1 race went in 1:49:4; this won't go as fast. ROCK OUT should have been better last week and is a tough call now if the price is short; goes third start off the layoff. ABELARD HANOVER continues his drop down the ladder but was empty last out; perhaps not coincidentally the barn has been cold too.
