Bob Heyden Handicaps the Dan Patch Awards
Who will win tonight when the remaining Dan Patch Awards are announced at Dover Downs? Who should win? We asked Bob (Hollywood) Heyden to answer those questions.

HORSE OF THE YEAR

Clearly and definitively it will be and should be Bee A Magician. She is all set to become the 31st trotter honored, the 11th female trotter and the sixth undefeated winner of year-end honors as the best in the business. Seventeen for seventeen during a stellar 2013 season, she left the voters with a purely academic choice for the top honor.

Bob Heyden gives a firm nod to Bee A Magician in the race for Horse of the Year

Consider that:
-She posted the fastest sophomore time-1:51 flat-a world record. That's 3/5ths faster than any sophomore male

-She won over $1.5 million, 368K more than the previous mark set by the outstanding Continentalvictory in 1996 when she made $1.178 million
-She had more starts than any other undefeated Horse Of The Year in 49 years. Bret Hanover was 24-24 in 1964.
-She surpassed Moni Maker (1999-$1.494 million) on the single season earning list for any age female-trotter or pacer. And, by the way, she did so on November 30 at the New Meadowlands in the Moni Maker and will be honored on February 23 at Dover Downs on Moni Maker's 21st birthday.
-For the sixth time in the last eight years, and the third time in a row, a trotter will be Horse Of The Year.
-For co-owner David McDuffee, this award will come exactly 20 years after his first division title winner-Magical Mike (sire Of Gallo Blue Chip), who was the 2-Year-Old Colt Pacer of 1993. McDuffee and co-owner Mel Hartmann, who also have Spider Blue Chip, had the fastest male and female sophs of 2013.

PACER OF THE YEAR

This has to be almost as easy as the Horse Of The Year-Captaintreacheraus. From the first crop of 2008 HOY Somebeachsomewhere, he thoroughly dominated the competition, becoming the first 2-year-old champion since Presidential Ball in 1992 to come back the next year and win the Meadowlands Pace and the North America Cup, and knocked on the door of $3 Million career after a stirring Breeders Crown score. His credentials are many:

-He should become only the second horse to be named Pacer Of The Year at both 2 and 3, joining Niatross (1979 and 1980).

-He is poised to become the first Pacer Of The Year to go back to back since Jennas Beach Boy did it in 1995-1996

-When he met up with Foiled Again in the TVG year-end finale, it marked the first time in the 21st century that the two defending Pacers Of The Year had clashed. It had not happened since 1999, when 1997 winner Western Dreamer and 1998's champ Red Bow Tie hooked up.

-He has an advantage in the Pacer Of The Year balloting over 9-year-old Foiled Again because in 29 of the 43 years the award has been given out it has gone to a sophomore.

-Assuming that Bee A Magician and Captaintreacheraus are 1-2 or 2-1 in the Horse Of The Year balloting, it'll mark the first time in 26 years that the same farm went 1-2 at year's end. The honor will go to White Birch Farms. The last time this occurred? It 1987 when Mack Lobell dominated with 230 votes dominated and Jate Lobell was next with nine.

Let's give a "Very Honorable Mention" for Pacer Of The Year to Foiled Again

You've got to love this guy. He is history's first ever pacer with 3 straight $1 million seasons and he's won more money at just ages 7-8-9 than all but three horses in the sport's history. He never gives up, races in the toughest division by far and refuses to be passed. Especially as the season wears on, he seems to wear them out.

If he is named Pacer Of The Year, he'll become the first to ever do it twice but not back to back as he won this in 2011. He's already bagged the O'Brien, even though he didn't do his best work in Canada. So the sentiment seems to be in his favor. But this was the year of the Captain, who was simply extraordinary. Foiled Again will, for the moment, take a back seat to a rival he'll be seeing some of in 2014.

TROTTER OF THE YEAR

Bee A Magician is an obvious and deserved winner of this category.

And in the odd event someone still isn't quite sure about her worthiness or wants to argue that she beat a lackluster group of rivals, they need to ask themselves this question: Do you really think those 3-4 length breezes-in-the-park wouldn't have been a second or so faster is she needed it? And for those who say she wasn't in with a lot, I say someone made her go faster than the boys did on Hambo Day.

2-YEAR-OLD MALE PACER OF THE YEAR

Though his year was restricted to New York Sire Stakes events, He's watching may take home a Dan Patch Award

1:52.3.

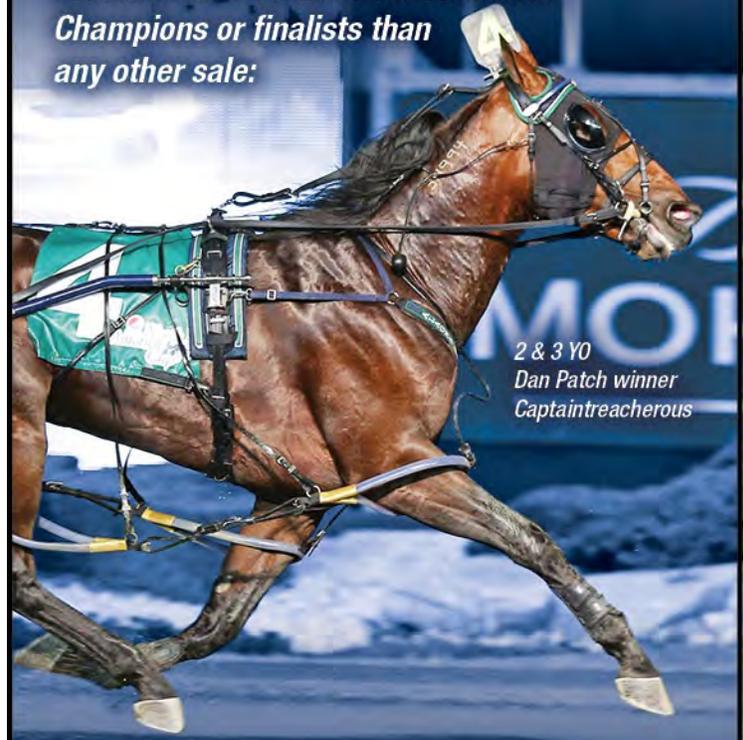

Since you cannot supplement a 2 year-old to the Breeders Crown we'll never know how he would have done at Pocono. I think I do. He'd have had his way with them. He's now in the hands of Joe Muscara (Mister Big-Mach Three) and comes off an unblemished season of 8-8. That sound familiar? The most famous New York bred of all-time, Gallo Blue Chip, was also 8-8 with a similar schedule in 1999 (also no Breeders Crown) and he went on to become the sport's richest ever pacer upon retirement.

As for Luck Be Withyou, he had a big night at Pocono on Breeders Crown Night and, according to Ron Pierce, he wasn't even at his best. Trainer Chris Oakes trains the solid son of Western Ideal, who has every license to be a good one. But here's the issue: It was anyone's year in 2013 among the freshman. In what may be the most telling stat of the year, no two-year-old pacing colt in 2013 made as much as $400,000. If any division lacked spark in 2013, this was the one.

It's He's Watching versus Luck Be Withyou I'll give nod to He's Watching. This son of American Ideal was 8-8 on the season, and in each of his first two appearances he recovered from a miscue to win. In his last start he set the world half-mile record for a freshman winning his NYSS at Yonkers in

3-YEAR-OLD MALE TROTTER

It's Royalty For Life versus Spider Blue Chip
I gave the slightest of nods to Spider Blue Chip.
I went for the "Strong Yankee" angle, going for the horse who finishes up the best and leaves a more lasting impression.

Will Spider Blue Chip win at the Dan Patch ballot box?

Spider Blue Chip captured the Colonial and the Breeders Crown and was hanging in there earlier on versus Royalty For Life when the latter was at his best.

It's a shame that one has to lose since this category is nearly a toss-up and both are deserving. It reminds me of Manofmanymissions and Pastor Stephen in 2010 when the final tally was 56-55 in favor of "Stephen" in the race for 2-year-old male trotter of the year

This is a good battle here and when you throw in Createine we had a solid core to the sophomore ranks in 2013 that made for good racing and some good water cooler post season chat.

OLDER FEMALE PACER

It's Androvette versus Rocklamation

Androvette should get her third straight title. Shady Daisy (1992-1994) and Eternal Camniation (2001-2003) were the only others to do that, all at ages 4-5-6.

Last year when Androvette won she had Less money than Rocklamation on her card, $770K to $698K. Her Breeders Crown win was the difference. This year, Anndrovette had more money going into Crown night and more wins, and neither took home the Crown trophy. It's kind of like boxing, when you take on the defending champion you have to take it away from them.

Rocklamation's upset in the Milton at 12-1 put her in the discussion here for sure, especially considering that Androvette was third, almost three lengths back. What a nice daughter of Rocknroll Hanover this one is. She made over $1million and was a big part of the $22 million record-setting season by Ron Burke.

But remember she drew post 1 to Androvettes' 2 in the Breeders Crown and it was pretty much a given that if either of those two won the Crown they would take home the hardware. It didn't happen. Androvette by unanimous decision.

Pacer of the Year Battle Highlights Dan Patch Night

By Bill Finley

There will be the slam dunks tonight at the annual Dan Patch Awards banquet to be held at Dover Downs. It's a given that Bee A Magician will be named Trotter of the Year. But there will also be some intrigue and, perhaps, controversy, particularly when it comes to the Pacer of the Year.

There are two worthy candidates in Captaintreacherous and Foiled Again and both had the type of special years that would ordinary land a championship. By now, you know their stories.

Captaintreacherous was simply terrific, especially when the big money was on the line. He won the North America

Cup, the Meadowlands Pace and the Breeders Crown during a season in which he earned over $2 million and won 13 of 16 starts.

Foiled Again wasn't nearly as consistent, but he did things no 9-year-old is supposed to do. He won 11 times, made $1.4 million and finished the year with a flourish, taking the Breeders Crown and the TVG Free-For-All Pace. As popular a standardbred as there has been in years, he is sure to have won over voters who factor sentiment into the equation.

"He's doing things have never been done." trainer Burke said after the TVG win. "What other horse can you say that about? I know I am partial, but he deserves (Pacer of the Year)."

In the final Harness Racing Communications Top 10 poll of 2013 there was little separating the two pacers. Captaintreachers had 284 points and two first-place votes, while Foiled Again had 258 points and one first-place vote. This one could go either way.

In another category that left voters with a tough decision, Hambletonian winner Royalty For Life is a narrow favorite over Spider Blue Chip to be named 3-Year-Old Male Trotter of the Year. Royalty For Life owned the first half of the season, winning the Hambletonian, the Zweig and the Canadian Trot, but Spider Blue Chip came on strong at the end and won the Colonial and the Breeders Crown.

In the 2-year-old male pacing division the award will go to either He's Watching or Luck Be Withyou, and neither horse exactly has impeccable credentials. Bought for $3,000 as a yearling, He's Watching was a great story on his way to a perfect 8 for 8 year but he made all of his starts against restricted company in New York Sire Stakes races. Luck Be Withyou won when it counted most, capturing the Breeders Crown by a neck. But his only other win of note came in the $125,565 Champlain at Mohawk and he lost more races (6) than he won (5).

The older female pacer of the year will also be announced tonight and the finalists are Anndrovette and Rocklamation.

There will be zero suspense when they announce Trotter of the Year (Bee A Magician) and very little suspense when they announce Horse of the Year (also Bee A Magician).

The other categories and winners were announced

Golden Receiver Guts Out a Win in 2014 Debut

It wasn't easy, but Golden Receiver got the job done in his 2014 debut, winning by a neck over the Ron Burke-trained, Yannick Gingras-driven Easy Again in a $30,000 Free-For-All event at the Meadowlands.

It was Golden Receiver's first pari-mutuel start since he finished second behind Foiled Again in the Nov. 30 TVG Free-For-All Pace, also at the Meadowlands.

Now 9 and driven by regular pilot Corey Callahan, Golden Receiver took his customary spot on the lead and was a half-length in front after an opening half mile in 54.4. In mid-stretch he still had the lead but Easy Again and Dovuto Hanover were both bearing down on him and he looked to be in serious trouble.

"(Trainer) Mark (Harder) had him ready to go; he brought him in ready tonight and he showed up," Callahan said. "I was able to give him a little middle breather going to the half and that helped. When they straighten up he doesn't want to let anybody go by. He wants to win."

Golden Receiver paid $4.20 and his time was 1:49.2. Surprisingly, Easy Again was the favorite at 4-5.

With the Presidential not scheduled this year at the Meadowlands, Harder's options are limited over the next few months. He said Golden Receiver will likely race primarily at the Meadowlands in spots similar to last night's until Grand Circuit season starts.

The Alberta Assassin is for Real

Coming into the Meadowlands last night off races at Alberta Downs and Northlands Park in Western Canada, National Debt was the mystery horse in the second leg of the Gilmour Memorial series but he's an unknown quantity no more. This 3-year-old is the real deal.

Making his first start in the U.S. and in the "big time," the son of Allamerican Native trounced 2-5 favorite Dinner At The Met to win by three lengths in 1:50.3. The second-place finisher also came into the race undefeated.

The first division of the Gilmour was won by 3-10 favorite Capital Account, who went in 1:51.

Watching at a simulcast location in Alberta, co-owner and former trainer Kelly Hoerdt said the $17,000 yearling purchase exceeded his expectations because he didn't think the colt was primed for his best effort for new trainer Ron Coyne Jr. because his recent training had been hampered by the rough winter.

"We knew he was a good horse and we were very confident when Tim Tetrick picked him over some others in the race, but, no we weren't expecting him to do what he did tonight," Hoerdt said. "We thought he was ready for a good effort, but not 1:50.3 or anything like that."

Hoerdt said that he had just sent off the February staking payments for many of the major races in North America.

"That's something you worry about when your horse hasn't been tested against the op level," he said. "But it was something we knew we needed to do. If we were to sell him it's important to have him staked for the races like the Meadowlands Pace and if we keep him we want to be able to go in those races if he proves to be good enough."

What Grade Would You Give the ABC System?

By Christie DeBernardis

Joining the Meadowlands and Ocean Downs, Freehold Raceway is the latest track to institute the "ABC" system of classified racing, which makes for a sample size of three tracks and some 13 months. Has it worked? It depends on who you ask.

Adopted at the Meadowlands over a year ago, the ABC system requires the race secretary to classify each horse racing at their track as A1, A2, B1, B2, C1, and C2, with A1 being the top class and C2 being the lowest class. A horse can be upgraded or downgraded in their letter classification at the discretion of the race secretary based on their performances on the track. The classification each horse receives is based on several different factors.

"The class the horse started in his previous starts is a huge indicator," Freehold's racing secretary Karen Fagliarone offered. "Other factors are the horse's earnings, both annually and last five starts, competition lines, his trip and time in his last performance, and the odds that the horse had gone off at in his last few starts."

The letter classifications do not directly transfer from track to track, however, as they are based on the overall group of horses racing at that venue. The Big M has higher quality racing than Freehold Raceway so, according to Fagliarone, a C1 at the Meadowlands would be equivalent to a B1 at Freehold.

The race secretaries at both Freehold Raceway and the Meadowlands are happy with the new system so far.

"From a management perspective, the tote board has been really even and the payoffs have been nothing under $6," Fagliarone said. "No more 2-5 shots and no more 1-9 shots in the classified racing. That indicates to us that we are doing a really good job."

Peter Koch, Director of Racing for the Meadowlands, shared similar sentiments.

"I would definitely say ABC Racing leads to more competitive racing on the racetrack, which is good for the bettors," Koch said. "If the horseman look up and they are a long shot, they feel like they may not be in the right class, so it leads to more evenly matched fields. Everyone feels like they have a chance to get money."

Mark Ford is no fan of the ABC system

While the Big M reports that ABC Racing has led to an increase in handle, Freehold stated that it is still too early to tell.

"We started [ABC Racing] last year and had a banner year," Koch remarked. "There were a few different things that caused that, but I would say that definitely a part of it was the switch to classified racing."

On the other hand, Fagiarone stated that, "Because of the weather it is really unfair to say whether or not the handle has been increased.

A lot of our handles are based on other tracks. When other tracks cancel, people bet more on us. So many tracks have canceled because of weather so it is hard to make a fair assessment right now."

The local horsemen are of mixed opinion when it comes to ABC Racing. While some have embraced the new system, others are very much opposed. Trainer Lori Molnar, who races regularly at Freehold Raceway, is supportive of the new system.

"I am very much for it and when it is done properly, it is the best thing for the sport," Molnar remarked. "It makes it all equal and I like it. Everyone finishes within a length or two of each other. No one is out there winning by 30 lengths or at 1-9. I think it is much better."

New Jersey based conditioner Stacy Chiodo, whose string races at both Freehold and the Meadowlands, is also in favor of ABC Racing.

"I think anything that makes more competitive fields and gets the handle up is a good thing," Chiodo said. "I think it is easier and I am definitely up for it. I do not have any issues with any of my horses in this system. I think both Pete [Koch] and Karen [Fagiarone] have done a good job classifying them."

Trainer Mark Ford, who, in New Jersey, races primarily at the Meadowlands, is at the opposite end of the spectrum.

"It may have worked in 1960 when horses were all at the track and they had a closed audience, but it absolutely does not work now," Ford said. "It doesn't work for us [the horsemen] and I don't think anyone likes it other than the people that came up with it. I am horribly sick of it and can't wait until they get rid of it."

Ford argues that part of the problem is that the ABC system at the Meadowlands and Freehold does not correspond with the systems at other tracks, such as Yonkers and Poconos. He also asserts that it gives too much power to the judgment of one person.

"It doesn't work because it gives one person too much of an opinion," Ford commented. "Not that they [the race secretaries] don't have a good opinion, but if you have a horse with $2,300 made in his last five [starts] racing in a B1 it does not make sense. Horses can't drop down and you can't plan where you put your horses. It came down from the powers that be as some sort of experiment and I just don't care for it at all."

Another Freehold regular, trainer Mike Posner, has not quite decided how he feels about the new system just yet.

"I am not sure if I have an opinion yet," Posner said. "I don't see it being all that different. My four claimers that I put in the C2 are racing against the other four claimers they were racing against before. It is just a different classification."

There is one aspect of the ABC system that Posner finds beneficial to his barn, however.

"I think it might be a little bit better in the respect that if I am questionable about a horse that I think might have some ability, I am not forced to put it in a claimer," Posner remarked. "I can keep it as a condition horse until I am either very disgusted with its ability and my self delusion is out, or maybe it comes around and I have a horse that may be a better horse without ever having to classify it. What I like about ABC is that you can race a bad horse while he is bad in a cheaper division, without him having the stigma of being called a claimer. You do this with the hope that maybe his ability is something better than you thought it might be, but he just wasn't given enough of a chance and maybe you will have a better horse."

While the horsemen may be of mixed opinions and still testing out the waters of the new ABC system, it seems most are receptive to it. Both track officials and patrons also view the new classification system as beneficial so, despite some complaints, it seems for now at least ABC is here to stay.

Barry Mandell Says...

It seems the Monticello Racino's only horse concern is that of a Trojan Horse, masked in VLT slots legislation after the 9-11 tragedy, whereby they could set up a Racino with the hopes that "some day" harness racing would legislatively be abandoned. It should have been grandfathered into the legislation that if full casino betting was ever allowed it would also benefit the horsemen to some extent. One wonders what the Yonkers owners have up their legislative agenda the next decade now?

In regards to drivers abandoning the premiere harness racing venue at the Meadowlands, what will happen when, and it's no longer an if issue, the Meadowlands is granted a full Racino license with the Hard Rock Hotel conglomerate? Governor Christie and Sweeney look like pathetic, legislative, bought off dolts now in New Jersey and with Atlantic City cratering in revenue, the attempts to end harness racing in New Jersey have come full circle and now it looks like a new day will be seen in Trenton!

When the Meadowlands is granted its deserved casino license, shouldn't the owner be allowed to deny access to any driver they decide to, since the drivers considered what was best for them and not the sport as a whole? It's a two way street in business. With the horrific weather this winter, the Meadowlands handle has only been down 7-10% on certain nights as compared to last year's handles. Once the purse structure is slots enhanced drivers will be clamoring for acceptance back at The Big M. It's just a matter of time now. The clock is ticking on Christie and Sweeney and they know it!

He, Too, Doesn't Like Claiming Races

Kudos to Murray Brown for taking a stand against claiming races. I would like to add a few points.

Standardbred horses are intelligent, sensitive animals. They are also creatures of habit. They, not unlike we humans, like their own comfortable routines. Many claiming horses switch barns with alarming frequency. This has to be incredibly stressful for these animals, whose only reward for their valiant efforts is to be hauled away by an unknown trainer to a foreign barn. There they have a different stall, different companions, perhaps different feed, a different caretaker, a different regiment with a new routine and no continuity with their former life. These horses are being used like poker chips, for a short term profit with no concern or respect for the animal.

The success of the Meadowlands ABC classification, which insures evenly matched exciting racing, demonstrates that claiming races are not needed. Claiming races often have short priced favorites that dominate and they do not make for competitive or interesting racing.

One of the hardest things to explain to a new owner or prospective fan is the concept of claiming races. Even with limited knowledge of the sport they sense something wrong and we should to.

Now what can be done? Let us take a good look at claiming races and really consider what they do for the sport. They generally cheapen the value of all horses. They take money away from the purchase and development of young horses.

In the mean time, one way to at least discourage the constant flipping of claimers would be to re-institute an old practice. Claimed horses must be moved up 20% in class for 60 days (or at least 10% for 30 days).

If we don't take a stand for our beloved standardbreds, who will?

John Balzer

Drinking the Kool-Aid at Yonkers

As a Meadowlands regular I was watching the replay of the seventh race from Yonkers on February 8 from my PC at home. After the race I happened to leave it on thus hearing the color commentators (Frank Drucker and others), I almost fell off my chair when I heard the following comment come out of their mouths regarding the move of one Ron Pierce—"Pierce was over at the 'swamp' for a while and now makes the move to the big time."

When somebody supposedly in the business makes a comment like that one has to wonder if they are in the right profession. I am not even going to dignify the "swamp" derogatory comment but if they really think a move from the Meadowlands to Yonkers is a move to the big time they are drinking way to much of their own "kool-aid."

As anybody worth their salt will tell you the smaller the track the less skill it takes to drive. Most of the major races of any significance are raced on a mile or possibly at 5/8ths. The only current Yonkers drivers hat get a lot of Grand Circuit mounts are Sears and Pierce, former "swamp" drivers.

The only thing going for Yonkers is purse $$$$$ due to slots. The handle and attendance is atrocious. Most serious bettors will not even bother with Yonkers. I'm also sure if you ask drivers owners, trainers etc which is the big time it will not be Yonkers. If Yonkers never got slots they would have been out of business a long time ago.

Best Regards,
John Christiansen

Why I'm A Cheapskate

It's a tribute to Bill Finley and the staff at Harness Racing Update that you are not afraid to express strong opinions, and I hope you never stop. Thanks for letting me express mine:

I guess I'm one of those rare birds who keeps track of how much he bets on harness races in any given month or year, and I can tell you straight up that until the sport cleans up its act (probably not in this lifetime) it will never be a lot.

Therefore, I am an avowed cheapskate when it comes to placing bets, and I'm old enough to remember when the Meadowlands first opened. I love the sport as a fan and often watch races without betting. I bring two twenty-dollar bills with me to the track. Some of your readers will probably laugh at me for this, but I usually use only the first twenty for a whole night of betting. Last week, for the first time since last summer, I had a bad night and had to open my wallet to pull out the second twenty.

Inexplicable form reversals, head-scratching driver strategies, syringe-toting trainers, mysterious odds-shuffling at race time - what more do you need before you become a little more skeptical about emptying your pockets on a harness race?

If I like a horse, then he gets keyed in a $1 Daily Double part wheel. For example, 1 with the 1/2/3. Total cost $3. That's it. Or how about a 50-cent Pick 3: 1 with 2/3 with 4/5? Total cost $2, or 67 cents per race. How ya like them high-rollin' apples?

And my favorite of all bets, though only allowed presently at Woodbine: 20-cent Pick 3: 5/6 with 1/2/3 with 4/5. A cheapskate's dream bet - seven horses for two dollars and forty cents. If I'm feeling frisky that night, I hit the repeat button for a grand total of four dollars and eighty cents, or $1.60 per race. Tossing heavy favorites, as you well know, is always good strategy.

So laugh all you want. But my betting is directly proportional to the trust I have in the races. Of course no racetrack official would ever hold me up as an example of a great harness fan because they live and die by large betting handles. But pouring money into shady-looking races displays less good sense than God gave a duck, or in this case, a horse.
