Banning Trainers is Not Enough, Gural Needs to Explain Why

By Garnet Barnsdale

The Meadowlands management banned two more trainers this week - PJ Fraley and Alvin Callhan - with nary a word as to why. While Jeff Gural and his team are widely lauded - and rightfully so - for saving harness racing in New Jersey mostly by focusing on the "customer", the elephant in the grandstand when a horseman is "excluded" from racing is: shouldn't the public be told why?

Understanding the law supports Gural and crew anytime

Rene Allard is among the trainers not allowed to race at the Meadowlands, but track owner Jeff Gural refuses to say why they exclude a participant, surely they must know that tossing a trainer off the grounds raises questions in bettors minds as to why - that is, what are these guys doing that others aren't that require them to be removed? The need for a statement of some kind, even a vague one, is even more pressing when the trainer is supported by statements made by an owner, such as this one supplied by Jeff Bamond, one of Fraley's main owners and co-owner of three-time Dan Patch winner for Older Pacing Mare Androvette. He said: "I will say that I am going to stand by P.J. Whatever they are saying happened is false and we will, maybe, pursue this a different way."

When I read "whatever they are saying is false" the first question that comes to mind is, of course, WHAT are they "saying"?

The Meadowlands has made remarkable strides in the past couple of years to improve their product and create racing that their "customer" wants to bet. Of that there can be little dispute. Creating a "clean" product and winning back the bettors' confidence is the hallmark of their revival - but shouldn't there be some transparency to what they're doing with these "exclusions"?

I took this question to social media and found that most respondents overwhelmingly answered yes, some with an exclamation mark. Take Twinspires columnist/handicapper Derek Simon, for example, who opines, "Cleaning up the sport without transparency is not really cleaning up the sport. I think Gural's intent (at least my perception of his intent) - to clean up the sport - is great. However, the execution here is all wrong. There needs to be transparency. It reminds me, a bit, of product warning labels. If I see a label that says "keep away from direct sunlight," I want to know why. Will the product cease to be effective? Will it melt? Will it explode? If it is the latter, I don't want the product at all! Simon continues, "Likewise, as a bettor and one who loves the sport of horse racing - in all its forms - I want to know WHY a trainer or jockey or rider is being told to take a hike."

Being that the Big M's focus during its resurgence has all been related to the customer- bettors- I asked a varied bunch of bettors in a Facebook handicapping group this question: When a track "excludes" a horseman from competition, such as The Meadowlands has done this week with two trainers, should they make details available to the betting public as to why? The responses of the 20 people that answered fairly quickly were telling. Sixteen, or

80%, answered yes including long-time bettor AJ Magro, who had this to say: "I believe they should because if I spent money on a certain trainer's horses I would like to know the past reason(s) and also for future reason(s) for exclusion for wagering purposes."

David Schwartz, founder of the website The Horse Handicapper.com answered the question with a question of his own: "If a horsemen is being excluded, it must be for cause. If there is a cause, why should it not be universally known?"

Bettor Justin Pecora was a bit more pointed with his comments. "They're being denied for a reason, the public should and needs to know, especially when money is involved. For the record I know Gural saved the place, but this guy is playing judge, jury and executioner."

Retired horseman Freddy Hudson (of Roosevelt Raceway fame) says he believes disclosure is important. "I feel for the integrity of racing the public is entitled to know the reason of a suspension or why someone is barred," he remarks.

Clearly, many of the bettors that responded said there was a need to know. Those that voted "no" based their response mainly on potential issues with legalities if there were to be a pending lawsuit of some kind.

The flip side to all this is Gural's intent to card competitive races with full fields. He has gone as far as to place prominent ads asking for horsemen to support The Meadowlands by keeping the entry box full, even when the purses were not as high as competing ovals. If you're trying to attract entries, is banning participants with no explanation going to help? Perhaps revealing as much detail as possible would also deter other cheaters; food for thought.

wanted a horse. He had the money to back his bravado and never flinched when the price of poker went up for the best stock. He didn't like to lose a great horse.

Bill Perretti

Perretti came to his interest in harness racing after making his mark in the car dealership world as "Wild Bill." He had mixed success with his horses at first. Not easily discouraged, he just dreamed in bigger terms. He built Perretti Farms and acquired the services of Bob Marks, an industry veteran with an encyclopedic knowledge of harness pedigrees and all aspects of the game.

He stocked his stud barn with the likes of Matt's

Scooter, Malabar Man, Muscles Yankee, Artiscape, Rocknroll Hanover and others of that ilk.

In a 2006 Hoof Beats article, Perretti was quoted as being "vehemently" against the idea of limiting stallion books. The shrewd businessman felt that harness racing had many other issues of far greater importance ---including the rapid decline of wagering and shrinking base of owners and fans---- to worry about limiting stallion books.

Bill Perretti Passes Away at Age 87

By Dean Hoffman

You always knew exactly where you stood with Bill Perretti, who passed away Wednesday. You knew because Bill Perretti told you. In no uncertain terms.

Undoubtedly, more people admired Bill Perretti than liked him. He was often not an easy man to like. Loud, rude, profane---yes, he could be all of those. But no one ever questioned his commitment to the horse business and he was a major player in the Standardbred sport in recent decades before his death this week at age 87.

Also , no one ever doubted Perretti's gameness when he Perretti was well known for spending big for fillies, too. He'd proven that in 1986, paying an astonishing $430,000 for the Albatross filly Robin P Hanover. Though his farm competed with the giant Pennsylvania nursery, Perretti maintained close ties to Hanover Shoe Farms. Ironically, he never knew Hanover founder Lawrence B. Sheppard, but the two men were cut from much the same cloth: outspoken and often blunt and relentless in their desire for the best horseflesh the Standardbred business had to offer. Both Sheppard and Perretti were visionaries who didn't suffer fools gladly.

Every horse owner endures his share of heartbreak. If you own livestock, sooner or later, you're going to own dead stock. But it seemed that Perretti had more than his share of misfortune in the past decade.

In March, 2006, a fire---every horse owner's worst nightmare--- swept through a barn at Perretti Farms, resulting in the death of 24 mares and foals. Two years later, Triple Crown winner Windsong's Legacy died unexpectedly at Perretti Farms at age seven, before his best foals-----Lucky Chucky and Chapter Seven---had raced.

Last year Perretti-based supersire Rocknroll Hanover, arguably the best pacing sire in the business, died at age 11 after siring Rock N Roll Heaven, A Rocknroll Dance, Put On A Show and five other millionaires.

His showplace Perretti Farms in central New Jersey was vitiated in recent years by the fact that the Garden State didn't have slots. Thus his stallions were competing against those based in neighboring New York and Pennsylvania where slots revenues boosted purses dramatically. It was a travesty at times to see yearlings by Muscles Yankee and Rocknroll Hanover selling for discounted prices simply because New Jersey didn't have a robust sire stakes program.

Muscles Yankee, of course, had vaulted to the top of the trotting ranks when he sired three Hambletonain winners---Deweycheatumnhowe, Muscle Hill, and Muscle Massive---a feat accomplished previously only by Star's Pride in the mid-1960s.

Those who worked with Perretti closely said he had a remarkable ability to separate wheat from the chaff in sizing up business problems. He wasn't afraid to break tradition or step on toes. He also liked to be the one calling the shots. He was one of the partners that purchased The Red Mile and Tattersalls in 2000 and began revitalizing those aging dowagers, but differences of opinion within the partnership soon led Perretti to sell out.

Few people in harness racing know about Bill Perretti's involvement with Thoroughbreds but last year his Forty Tales was one of the best sophomore sprinters in America. He won five races in 11 starts, earned $666,789, and is now standing at stud in New York. Perretti also plunked down $380,000 for a Thoroughbred yearling filly last summer. In an online posting shortly after Perretti's passing, faithful employee Bob Marks said that the lyrics of Frank Sinatra's signature song "My Way" summed up Bill Perretti's life.

Yes, Bill Perretti certainly did things his way.

Campbell Hopes to be Back on March 28

Though he has yet to get final clearance from his doctor, Hall of Fame driver John Campbell is planning on returning to action for the March 28 card at the Meadowlands. Campbell has been out since breaking his collarbone in an ice skating accident in mid-February. He was operated on on Feb. 12.

John Campbell is nearing his return

“Everything is healing up well and there have been no complications,” Campbell said. “Everything is going along just the way it is supposed to. The bone has to fill in to be pretty solid before I go back to work just because of the pressure you put on it when you are using that much upper body strength. The doctor was really happy with the pictures the last time I was there but said it has to fill in and be more solid. If you tear anything apart in there with that plate in there you have to start all over.”

Campbell said he will begin jogging horses as early as next week and doesn't expect there will be any rustiness when he does return.

“I will be training horses before I go back so I will be good to go,” he said. “My range of motion is good, my strength is good. There shouldn't be any adjustment period for me going back. I'll want to win as soon as I come back. It's no fun losing.”

Foiled Again Wins Another Meadowlands Qualifier

By Nick Salvi

Friday qualifiers showcased several returning stars on a chilly morning in East Rutherford, NJ. Sevruga made his second appearance for the Andy / Julie Miller barn and continued his return to form with a 1:54.2 / 28.1 win out of the pocket. He followed Detour Hanover's even fractions around the track before edging out head stretch and widening as he pleased.

Foiled Again had another sharp qualifier yesterday at the Meadowlands

Heston Blue Chip made his seasonal bow, plodding along through slow fractions for Tetrick before a 27.1 sprint through the final quarter in a 1:55 mile, pretty much all in to hang on over a hard charging Escape The News.

Ron Burke sent own a bunch of good older horses this morning and they pretty much took over for the second half of the qualifying card.

Foiled Again was sent to the front by Gingras in his second go-round and tacked a 26.3 close on a 1:51.1 mile. He was several lengths clear of the competition in a visually impressive workout. Doctor Butch was second in a solid effort.

Top pacing mares came next and the tantalizing Burke triumvirate of Camille (Kakaley), Rocklamation (Gingras) and Charisma Hanover (Andy Miller) came together on the wire in 1:51.4 with Rocklamation and Charisma Hanover closing from a ways back into the 26.3 last quarter. They looked great.

Sweet Lou looked the best of the lot today. He sat an early pocket through the 57.2 half for Yannick, then ripped out of the pocket through consecutive 27.2 / 26.2 quarters on the end of the 1:51.1 mile on his own.

Yonkers Announces Across-the-Board Purse Increase

BY FRANK DRUCKER, Publicity Director, Empire City @ Yonkers Raceway

YONKERS, NY, Friday, March 14, 2014 – Yonkers Raceway has announced an across-the-board purse increase of approximately 15 percent, beginning with the race week of Monday, March 24th.

The new purse structure shall range from $9,000 (for non-winners of $5,000 in last six starts) to $38,000 (for the trio of weekly Opens/Open Handicaps). The "old" range went from $6,500 to $33,000.

"We realize that with Pocono and Harrah's Philly opening, horsemen have more choices, and we're committed the maintaining the best racing right here," general manager Bob Galterio said. "As always, we appreciate their support and encourage everyone to take a look at the new purse schedule."

Meadowlands Drivers' Tournament To Pit Legends vs Phenoms

East Rutherford, NJ: Beginning on Saturday, March 22 The Meadowlands will host a six week tournament for drivers that pits the sport's established stars against the emerging new talent.

Each Saturday night through April 19 (five legs) a point tally determined by each driver's order of finish will be kept over the course of the entire race card and the top point earner for each of those two groups will be awarded $2,000 for their efforts.

The tournament will conclude on April 26 with a final in which the top point earners over the course of the five preliminary legs will compete in a series of races on the card. The winner of the final will be awarded $15,000, second place is worth $5,000, third $3,000 and all other finalists will receive $1,000. This event is jointly sponsored by Jeff Gural and The Meadowlands with no effect on the purse account.

“During the Levy Series at Yonkers I thought this would be an opportunity to reward those drivers who remain loyal to the Meadowlands and at the same time create an opportunity for the younger drivers to earn some extra money,” said Meadowlands Chairman Jeff Gural. “With increased competition for the handle looming we feel the need to generate promotions that will hold the interest of our customers.

Scott Zeron will represent the phenoms in Big M driving competition

“I think this is also a great chance for out of town drivers to show off their skills at the sport’s most competitive racetrack during a time when there will be increased opportunity for them to get drives. We welcome those young drivers that would like to try their luck at The

There will be no specifically dedicated races for this contest. All drivers will be competing for their own interests, there is no team element other than to determine the top point earners for the purpose of awarding the prizes. The contest will consist of all races on each of the Saturday programs and the process will remain as it normally is so far as entering horses and driver selections. The trainers will enter their horses listing the driver of their choice. The drivers will make their choices with the judges by scratch time and trainers will be required to call the judges and react to those choices, then name whomever they wish if their first choice has gone elsewhere.

The “Legends” will be comprised of Yannick Gingras, David Miller, Corey Callahan, Tim Tetrick, Andy Miller and John Campbell (who expects to return to the sulky on March 28).

The “Phenoms” will include Scott Zeron, Andy McCarthy, Joe Bongiorno, Marcus Miller, Jimmy Marohn, Jr, and Tyler Smith among others.

Any drivers not listed above who race at The Meadowlands on the tournament Saturdays will compete as members of the “Phenoms” and are eligible for any prize awarded to that group.

The drivers named above and any others will compete of their own volition, as their personal schedule allows. They may compete in as many or as few of the preliminary legs as they choose.

Monticello Makes No Mention of New Racetrack at Casino Site—And Horsemen Aren't Happy About It

By Bill Finley

The company that owns Monticello Racetrack unveiled plans Thursday for a $750 million resort casino on the sight of the old Concord Hotel. There was one problem, though, not a word was said about putting a racetrack there.

A rendering of a proposed casino at Monticello—but where is the racetrack?

It was assumed that new facility would include a racetrack and the current Monticello, which has, to be kind, seen better days, would be shuttered. But it now appears that the ownership group, which is headed by the Malaysian company Genting, will not build a new track and will keep racing at the old location

"According to all the plans I have seen I don't see a

racetrack anywhere or even a mention of a racetrack," said Monticello Harness Horsemen's Association President Alan Schwartz. "The fact is they claimed at the presentation they've been working on these plans for over two years. They didn't just take the track out the other day. I am going to assume they never had any intention of having a racetrack at the Concord."

Schwartz said his group was told that the new location would include a modern racetrack and a facility that would be a major improvement over the old rundown racetrack.

"Last year they invited the horsemen's association to a presentation at the Sullivan Hotel, showing us a rendering of a new paddock, a new clubhouse, a new racetrack," he said. "They put on a dog and pony show for us and I do believe that was to get us on board to support them in their casino proposal. All it was was a dog and pony show. We were certainly misled and I think they said what they said to only to try to get our support."

Under current regulations, the horsemen will not benefit from any extra revenue that comes in from the full-fledged casino. Not happy with that situation they have taken away their permission allowing Monticello to simulcast its races outside New York. The result has been a drastically reduced handle which has led to sharp purse cuts and has cost the track money.

Schwartz said Monticello's apparent about face on building a new racetrack has made him more determined than ever to win the battle over the simulcasts.

CODE WORD had the obligatory tour of the track in his first start back last week since December and now drops following that race against a pumped-up Panesthetic. 7-year-old made over $200K last year as an older horse; tough to ignore the connections too. TARPON HANOVER had traffic issues last week when loaded but it was only after Andy elected to sit in; now it's back to the other Miller, Dave. ALSACE HANOVER was perfectly positioned last out but was lacking; not as quick as he once was. DELAWARE HANOVER debuts for Lewis; KEEP GOING can stay close from the rail for a share.

Race 9, C-2 Pace

At least compared to some of the counterparts we saw earlier in the week, this is actually a relatively strong group of C-2 pacers. THAT'S JUSTICE picks up McCarthy as Callahan stays loyal to Lewis with SHARK ON BOARD, but this one stands just as good a chance as any from the rail. Has now been nailed twice in a row but can beat these with any semblance of a trip; price play. SHADOW MARGEUX has been racing well but now tackles more seasoned foes. PEMBROKE DEWEY was Miller's pick of three but hasn't seemed overly sharp this meet. SHARK FANTASY won at first asking in Burke barn debut; another that steps up. FREDDY DAY HANOVER drops to the bottom but is yet to show anything since moving to Fiumenero; tries to beat these on memory. BETTOR B makes his second start back and drops.

MORGAN SHARK has been overwhelmed at the higher level in all his recent tries and now takes a key drop for Burke and Gingras. Four races back this one was 2/5 against a near "A" type level horse these days. ARSENAL was better last week on the drop but wasn't exactly explosive; tough call at the short price. I was surprised by the amount of tote action that OLDE TIME HOCKEY took last week; still seems up against it from out there although worth keeping an eye on. SIMPLY BUSINESS continues on the comeback trail for Silva and lures Miller off a couple others; interesting. OUR CULLENSCROWN N did well to chase home an even money favorite last out; will offer a big price tonight as Smith picks up the call.

PIERCE has been in against superior rivals and fast miles in all his recent tries but he's come up short at this level many times when well supported; no cinch.
