JL Cruzes to a World Record

By Bill Finley

EAST RUTHERFORD, NJ - JL Cruze just keeps getting better and better and so does his incredible story.

The same horse that was a non-entity last year at 3, won for the 15th time this year from 17 starts and did so in the fastest ever trotting mile in the storied history of the Meadowlands. Holding off a fierce late rally from the mare Shake It Cerry, JL Cruze won last night's $250,000 Graduate Final at the Meadowlands by a nose in 1:49.4. It was the fastest mile in history by a trotter on a one-mile track.

History was made last night at the Meadowlands as JL Cruze won the Graduate in a world-record time of 1:49.4 (Lisa Photo)

"You look at Mack Lobell and all the great trotters that have raced over this track and for us to come up here and be the first horse to trot in under 1:50 is unbelievable," co-owner Bill Dittmar said. "This is from a horse we hoped would be a condition horse and now he does this. It really is a fairy tale. We bought him hoping he would be competitive on the Dover, Chester circuit."

Dittmar and his partners paid a mere $37,000 for JL Cruze during last fall's mixed sale at Harrisburg. This year alone, he's made $428,735.

JL Cruze was a terror during the winter months at the Meadowlands, but winter stakes winners are supposed to be long forgotten by the time the top horses return in the spring. With JL Cruze, he has instead kept right on rolling, seemingly getting better all the time.

He first served notice that he was truly something special when he beat Father Patrick in successive legs of the Graduate series, which is restricted to 4-year-olds. Two weeks later he beat Sebastian K at Pocono Downs and last night he conquered Shake It Cerry. That's four straight wins over 2014 Dan Patch Award winners.

JL Cruze usually doesn't win by a lot, and last night was no exception.

With John Campbell again driving, the son of Crazyed was third in the early going before brushing to the lead approaching the half. He got there in 54.2 and was in front by 1 1/4 lengths. Father Patrick was the next to pull but it was clear on the backstretch that this was going to be a tough night for him as he was having problems keeping up. That seemed to cement the outcome for JL Cruze but Shake It Cerry had yet to be heard from.

With trainer Jimmy Takter doing the driving, Shake It Cerry closed with a rush and simply ran out of racetrack.

"There's no doubt about it, he's just very, very special," winning trainer Eric Ell said. "He's had a long year; he's been racing since January. Yet he just keeps getting better all the time. Everybody knows that he has to get beat sooner or later, when it's going to be I don't know. But I hope this fairy tale continues. (The world record) means a lot to me. I've been in the business a long time and have trained a lot of horses but nothing like this."

JL Cruze paid $3.20.

It was a puzzling effort from Father Patrick, who began his year with a win in the Maxie Lee at Chester, but has now lost three straight. He finished sixth, beaten by six lengths.

At a cost of $50,000, JL Cruze will be supplemented to next Saturday's Hambletonian Maturity, a $450,000 race. He must also be supplemented to the Breeders Crown, and Ell said no decision has been made on that call yet.

He's also in line to start in the Aug. 8 Cashman, where he

Another Big Win For Wiggle It as Teague Says
His Gelding is Better Than Somebeachsomewhere

By Bill Finley

EAST RUTHERFORD, NJ - It's not bragging if you can back it up.

From Day One, owner George Teague Jr. has told anyone who will listen that his Wiggle It Jiggleit is a very special horse, the best he has ever trained. He was saying it way back when Wiggle It was merely winning small wintertime stakes, but the 3-year-old gelding has more than proven his connections right. But after last night's impressive win in a Crawford Farms

It was another big night for Wiggle It Jiggleit (right)

Meadowlands Pace elimination race, Teague took his praise to the very highest level.

"I think he's got a step on (Somebeachsomewhere)," Teague said. "Don't print that. Then again, print it. I don't care. Compare the lines of those two, see which ones look the best. Somebeachsomewhere is the only one I've ever seen that might be as good as him. (Wiggle It Jiggleit) is the best horse I've ever had and the best horse I've ever seen race."

While this was just an elimination race and the time (1:48.4) was short of sensational, Wiggle It Jiggleit put in one of the very best efforts of his career. The horse normally storms off the gate, but on this night driver Montrell Teague elected to take him back to sixth in the seven-horse field. It at first seemed like a risky move, especially after he followed a dull 65-1 shot in Lyons Levi Lewis and was forced to go three-wide on the turn, but Wiggle It exploded in the stretch to win by a length over his North America Cup conqueror Wakizashi Hanover.

"I was looking at the program earlier and it kind of looked like the ones on the inside weren't going to leave as much, but the ones right beside me, they were going to float out there and try follow me," Montrell Teague said. "So I figured I'd try to switch it up on them and make them do another tactic. He can do it either way. That's one of the things that makes him a step ahead of a couple of the others."

Wakizashi Hanover was second, 4 1/4 lengths in front of Rock N' Roll World. The Iowa sensation Roland N Rock was last in his first career defeat and did not make the final.

Wiggle It Jiggleit will be heavily favored next week in the $706,000 final of the Crawford Farms Meadowlands Pace and , despite the confidence he has in his horse, George Teague is not going to take anything for granted.

"I feel good (about the final)," he said. "It never pays to get overconfident, but, look, if I said I wasn't confident I'd be lying to you. I've been confident in him since Day One. But there'll be good horses in there. In the Arsenal was very good tonight and Wakizashi Hanover was giant. He raced super."

Trained by Kelvin Harrison, In the Arsenal snapped a three-race losing streak to win the first of two elimination races. Aggressively driven by Brian Sears, he immediately went to the front and faced surprisingly little pressure. He coasted home to win by 1 ½ lengths over Dealt A Winner.

"He did everything he had to do and the easier we can make it, the better off we are," Sears said. The horse has been good all year. He's a sweetheart. I have no complaints. Each week he comes out and he's wringing his head, he's feeling good and that's all you can ask."

It will be trainer Kelvin Harrison's first Meadowlands Pace start in 23 years when he was third with Direct Flight, favored over Western Hanover.

"He's very competitive with anything on a mile track, but he's really slick on a half mile and as you can see he can get around any track," said Harrison. "After that quarter in 27.1 I knew they had to come and get him and I didn't think they could him from there. He's an easy keeper he doesn't need to train hard. Just give him a week and stay nice and healthy and we'll go from there."

Artspeak was made the 1-2 favorite, but could do no better than fourth.

Jeff Gural Is Fighting a Culture That Believes They're Doing Nothing Wrong

I was reading the letters to the editor to Harness Racing Update last weekend. Although not unusual, a couple of them focused on Jeff Gural, and his 'banning' of certain trainers and owners from his track. Some of the letter writers find his tactics arbitrary, capricious and without any rhyme or reason. They find it quizzical he is asking for help filling the box while he bans others who want to fill the box. They wonder where they stand.

Jeff Gural

Although most of these letter writers make some good points (and Jeff likely needs a PR person to hone his message for him), what Gural is doing isn't simple, or easy. It's not about a random truck pulled over on the side of a highway before the races. It's not about a cobalt test that reads like a Greek debt graph. Gural is fighting a culture.

The Steve Elliott article in HRU two weeks ago summed it up quite well, in my view, especially with one little gem: "Whenever you do good everyone wants to give you horses," he [Elliott] said. "They think you have the magic drug. That's the way this business is. I had an owner call me and he said he wanted to give me some good horses. He told me 'you got the stuff.' I said, 'really, what's the stuff?'"

In harness racing there's a belief from some owners that if 'you got the stuff' (i.e. a nice way of saying you're cheating), I want to do business with you, and I'll give you a barn full of horses. Winning begets more horses and more horses. It's a vicious circle. And it's been going on for a long time.

In the real world it's not like that.

If someone tells you your financial advisor is funneling money into things that are illegal and (although it might make you a couple of dollars) she's dishonest, you will run away from her as fast as you can. You would not want to trust your hard-earned money with someone like that, even though she's 'got the stuff'.

That potential, nameless owner of Steve Elliott's is probably not a bad person. He would not invest his friends' money in Ponzi schemes if he was a financial advisor; he's not robbing banks in his spare time. He's probably a nice fella. But in racing, it's all about the grey area of competition, and that's where things get muddy.

"It's often an obsession with fairness that leads people to begin cutting corners in the first place. Cheating is especially easy to justify when you frame situations to cast yourself as a victim of some kind of unfairness," said Dr. Anjan Chatterjee, a neurologist at the University of Pennsylvania, in an article via the New York Times. "Then it becomes a matter of evening the score; you're not cheating, you're restoring fairness."

This exact phenomenon was noted in cycling. Lance Armstrong - to this day - believes he did nothing wrong, because in his mind, to beat them he had to join them. He was a victim, and doing it was justified. Tyler Hamilton, another bike racer, explained in his book how he fought his EPO positive at the Olympics because he did not take EPO for the Games. Hamilton tested positive for EPO because he illegally blood doped before the Olympics - by mistake - with not his own blood, but blood from a man who had been taking EPO. They caught him for cheating (EPO), but they didn't catch him for cheating with what he thought they should catch him with (blood doping), so he felt victimized. See how this works?

Everyone seems confused as to why - when Gural catches a trainer with a cobalt reading - their owners stick with them. It's not confusing, because they're victims of the business, and of Jeff Gural.

Gural's method of operation, by calling people out and not letting them race at his tracks, is not without merit, nor is it ineffective, however.

Behavioral economist Dan Ariely recently conducted a series of studies on cheating. In one, he set up a test for college students whereby they had an opportunity to cheat on a test. They were instructed to write their answers down on a sheet and then transfer their answers to another final test sheet. Some students received a final sheet with the answer boxes shaded (the shaded boxes were the correct answers), and some did not. 20% of the students changed their answers from the original sheet when they realized they had the answer key. According to Ariely, they didn't really think they were cheating, by cutting this corner. They

This all changed when the same experiment was done, but the students were told not to use the answer sheet - because that would be cheating.

"If you specifically tell people in these studies not to use the answer key and just sign their name," said Zoe Chance, a doctoral student at Harvard who worked on some of the experiments, "they won't look at it."

The 'don't cheat' line in the sand might sound hokey, but it works when it's immersed in the culture. In a recent interview with Golf Digest, Lance Armstrong said this: "Golf is different from the culture of cycling. You might consider me the last guy to have anything to say about cheating but in golf I love adhering to the code of honor that we didn't have in cycling. If I moved the ball in the rough and got caught I just wouldn't regret it, I'd be heartbroken. When I think of reform in cycling, I think about golf."

Just this week this culture was exemplified with PGA Tour pro Scott Stallings. Stallings was prescribed something by a doctor that he was told was not banned. He was tested by the Tour while taking it, and he did not trigger a positive. All's well right? No harm no foul? No, that's not the way it works with the golf culture. Stallings found out months later the drug he was taking was banned, so he contacted the PGA Tour and called the positive on himself. He was suspended for 90 days. Some might say he should've kept quiet, appealed, claimed how unfair this all is; how he's a victim who did nothing wrong. But, that's not in the sport's culture.

Some may disagree with Gural's tactics; some say he needs to be clearer, more organized, with standards and practices; some say he has to be more concise and consistent. They have a point - Gural probably does need to do better from his end, and establishing a set of benchmarks that horsemen and horse owners can understand is not unreasonable. But there's no rule book for fighting a culture. Jeff Gural is up against something much bigger than he likely ever imagined.

With USTA Vice-President and Chief Operating Officer Mike Tanner

By Perry Lefko

The United States Trotting Association has invited 40 key industry stakeholders to meet in Columbus, Ohio on Monday for an industry-wide summit to discuss the issues regarding declining foal crops and USTA membership as well as to investigate new ways to recruit owners to the sport. In anticipation of the summit, Harness Racing Update talked to USTA Vice-President and Chief Operating Officer Mike Tanner to ask him what prompted the meeting, whether it's more important to attract new owners or new bettors, how slots would help the Meadowlands, collecting information and implementing it, and getting racing jurisdictions working together for the greater good of the industry.

HRU: What prompted this summit?

MT: We did something similar, not quite as broad in scope, back in the spring of 2009 that focused on pari-mutuel matters as I recall, but it was more of a think-tank than anything else. This is more targeted. We've identified specific topics we want to address that we feel need to be addressed for various segments of the industry, specifically the foal crop decline and ways to bring new people into the game. Unprecedented sounds too dramatic but it is something we really haven't done before. One of the feedbacks that we get is 'why don't you do this and why don't you do that?' It exceeds the autonomy of the USTA. A couple of people have suggested we just need to get everybody in a room and get them together and get things done. That's what we're doing. We're getting some very informed and very influential people in a room and let's see what we can or can't get done.

HRU: Is the intent once the summit is over to come up with some bullet points or ideas to work on going forward and how quickly would you be able to put them in place?

Mike Tanner

MT: Hopefully we can come out of there with two or three goals and some ideas as to how certain groups at the USTA can work together to implement those goals and my staff and I will give them priority and jump right into that if they are actionable items that people agree would be beneficial and we can get people to put them together. Absolutely, that's important.

HRU: How alarming is the declining foal crop? Do you have any numbers?

MT: In 1993, the overall mares bred in North America was 25,511 (18,628 in the U.S., 6,883 in Canada, and the registered foals totaled 15,043, including 10,900 in the U.S.). In 2003, it was 24,931 (16,874 in the U.S., 8,057 in Canada, and 15,156 registered foals, including 10,616 in the U.S.). In 2013, it was 13,196 mares bred (10,598 in the U.S., 2,598 in Canada, and 8,588 registered foals, including 6,966 in the U.S.). Last year it was 12,679 mares bred (10,173 in the U.S., 2,506 in Canada, and 7,830 registered foals, including 6,423 in the U.S.). The declines have been accelerated over the past five or six years. The economic collapse of 2008-2009 really seemed to grease the skids a little bit and that's when you saw the numbers on a percentage basis really get eye-catching - and I don't mean that in a good way.

HRU: Is there anything to suggest from a USTA point of view that there's a way for the negative trend to correct itself?

MT: We've seen membership numbers in the U.S. start to stabilize because the declines in membership were commensurate with the declines in foal crop (35,196 USTA members in 1994, 28,288 in 2000, 20,651 in 2010 and 17,276 in 2014). Over the past year or two they've slowed down. You may say that it's a helpful sign; you can interpret itself as such. But the purse money is still so good in the U.S. that there's incentive to get into the game from an ownership point of view perspective and the breeding would follow. We're feeling there's a disconnect somewhere. We've got all this money to give away. We've got these great purses and yet the interest isn't quite there in terms of the involvement. I think that's one of the things we're going to concentrate on Monday because it looks economically the incentives are in place.

HRU: Would getting slots at the Meadowlands help to ease or correct the problem?

MT: Slots would absolutely bring back the breeding industry in New Jersey. If you look at the New Jersey numbers, they are tragic compared to where they were 10 years ago, and that used to be such a strong state. The fact that the Meadowlands do not have slots and don't have the purses to necessarily compete with those around them that particular area has really suffered. Slots would bring back New Jersey. Is it enough to resurrect an entire industry? I think our challenges go beyond just that.

HRU: Would getting harness racing on national television and not just regionally help the breeding industry and maybe even the ownership aspect?

MT: The more exposure the better, but I don't know if it's just as simple as television anymore. There's more racing on TV now than there was 10 years ago and arguably more than there ever has been. There's just so much more competition, other forms of entertainment grasping for attention. Certainly there's more forms of gambling. It would be a good thing to be on TV, but it's one of many facets that would need to be addressed.

HRU: Short of attracting new owners by offering them astronomical bonuses, what is the answer?

MT: I became a real devotee of Customer Relations Marketing when I was working at Harrah's Chester for a couple years and the way they attracted customers was to learn as much about them demographically and psychographically and then go out into the general population and advertise to people who've shared those characteristics. I think that's one of the goals of the (industry-supported) website Harness Racing Fanzone. We learn more about who our customer is and what characteristics they possess and hopefully enable the racetracks and the organizations to go out and try to bring more into the fold. I guess one of the central questions we're going to talk about on Monday is what prompted you to own this racehorse? I don't think we can ask too many questions. There's so much data out there that we need to gather.

HRU: So where do you get that data/information from?

MT: I don't know that yet. I think that's one of the things we're putting together. We're trying to do a whole bunch of different things at once, and we've shifted more towards marketing over the past five years. It's still not our core competence, I don't think. I think we need to reach beyond ourselves and hope some ideas will come out of this meeting.

HRU: Is it more important to get bettors or is it more important to get owners?

MT: I think it's probably a cyclical question. I've thought about that myself. The lifeblood of the sport is getting people to participate parimutually because that drives handle. It's a little more complicated now because so many purses are slot infused, but in the old days in the traditional model your purses were bet entirely on how much money was bet into your pools. What we've seen anecdotally is owners that come bring in other people with them, and one of the ways to drive handle is to bring new owners into the game, so it's a bit of a chicken or the egg question. I think they feed upon each other.

HRU: Would the issue of the declining foal crop and attracting new owners be helped if all of the racing jurisdictions were working together as opposed to everyone fighting for their own turf?

MT: Any time you can get disparate groups working on the same problem and pulling in the same direction it's helpful. I think co-operation and moving towards a common goal can do nothing but help the sport move forward.

Meadowlands Qualifier Report

By the Meadowlands Staff

EAST RUTHERFORD, NJ – The Pace elimination morning edition of Breakfast with the Babies was conducted under skies as blue as Taylor Swift's eyes with fluffy clouds, flags were limp and temperatures in the 70's.

Filly trotters kicked it off with Southwind Hope, a $52,000 Muscle Hill Lexington sale purchase winning out of the pocket in 2:00/28.1 for Andy Miller. She tracked Pampered Winner until the stretch, tipped off her and went by willingly. Julie Miller trains for the family interests and partners Little E and Larry Dumain. The $400,000 Lexington sale topper Bene Bene made her debut in this one and went evenly in the back third of the field in a purely introductory performance.

Legal Lady won for John Campbell and Jan Johnson in the second. She took over from Ginny Weasley past the quarter and held sway comfortably in 2:00.3/29.3. Ginny held the place with Warriors Wear Pink and the late charging Non Stick close for third. The winner is a homebred Deweycheatumnhowe for Caroline Gerry.

The Katz & Libfeld homebred Hustle Heart won again this morning for the Millers, zipping by the leader around the turn and trotting home in 28.4 on the end of a 2:02 mile. Heal The World was a sneaky good second here for the Johanssons.

Lindy Farms and Robert Rudolph have a sharp -looking Cantab Hall colt named Taco Tuesday who breezed around the oval effortlessly in 1:58.1/ 28.4 all by himself.

The colt had a pair of Vernon Downs wins on his PP's for Lindy assistant trainer Domenico Cecere before coming in for a Tim Tetrick test drive at M1. He was a $62,000 Lexington buy last fall by trainer Frank Antonacci. Desert Runner had some late foot for Ake Svanstedt to be third.

Goin To The Limit went nicely, winning again for Tetrick from the Tony Alagna barn in a forwardly placed 1:59.3/29 mile. His $15,000 price at Lexington last fall certainly looks like a bargain for Tony and partners Jodi Siamis, John Fodera and Tangie Massey as he advances. Yes Sir Officer followed the winner and held safe for second under his own power for the Hall of Fame duo of John Campbell and Chuck Sylvester.

The big wood was out for race six with over $800,000 worth of horseflesh on the track and the $240,000 Lexington buy Winter Harbor shone brightest. The son of Muscle Hill rode along behind Steed through a 1:29.3 three panels and rolled right by when Scott Zeron moved him out a lane for the win. Steed held well for second and Curious De Vie flashed speed recovering from an early break to finish third. Tony Alagna trains the winner for Brittany Farms, John Cancelliere, Little E and the Winter Harbor Stable, a Myron Bell production.

As the gait switched to the pace, the Somebeachsomewhere filly Albany Girl was threaded through fillies late by Dave Miller and surprised Olivia Hope who seemed to have orchestrated the result just as she desired for Alagna Racing until the numbers were posted. The winner hails from the Jimmy Takter barn where she is trained on behalf of Christina Takter, John Fielding and Joe Sbrocco, who gave $55,000 for her at Harrisburg.

A List Hanover won back in 1:55.2 for Andy & Julie Miller on behalf of owner Mario Mazza. This $145,000 Harrisburg Somebeach filly led at every call and sprinted home in 28.1 to close the deal over the Alagna pair of Platinum Rocks and Torment Princess.

Pacing colts were the last bunch of freshmen to go and Andy McCarthy provided a perfect pocket trip to Inspiration View which the son of Shadow Play converted into a 1:56.1/28 win. He cost Rick Phillips, Pete Venturini and trainer Mark Harder $35,000 at Harrisburg last November. Cash Is King held for second with JK Heaven Sent and Sam McSmith both closing nicely in the stretch.

Alagna sent out the superfecta in the 10th race with the American Ideal colt Mindtrip a front-running 1:54.1/27.2 winner in impressive fashion for Brett Miller. Racing Hill was a good second, then Easy Lover Hanover and Tom Hill rounded out the ticket. The winner is owned by Alagna Racing, Joe Sbrocco, John Fodera and Thankful Reward Partners.

A few notable horses were in qualifiers today, preparing for the next few weeks of Grand Circuit racing.

Three-year-old trotting fillies had a presence with four of the best from last year getting in some work, led by Livininthefastlane who cut the mile and won in 1:53.3, requiring a 27 flat final quarter to hold Wild Honey, Jolene Jolene (making her first appearance of the season) and Speak To Me at bay.

Bee A Magician, Market Share and Mr Picolet were together in the fourteenth and Bee was a dominant winner in 1:52.4, sprinting home in 26.4. Market Share kept up and followed her through the wire while Mr Picolet, though third, is going to have to improve to compete at the top level.

McWicked returned to the races with a "better than it looks on paper" effort this morning. Dave Miller took him back, then moved into a 54.1 half with a 25.4 final quarter to be beaten four or five lengths to the good pacer Take It Back Terry, the winner's mile in 1:52 flat.

Split The House put on another impressive display in the Summertime Series Final
Courtesy of Woodbine Entertainment

A field of eight three-year-old pacing colts and geldings contested the final of the three-week Summertime Series. Split The House, who won the second leg, was sent off as the 4-5 favourite and was clearly in a league of his own on this occasion.

The James 'Friday' Dean trainee got away in fourth in the early going, while Poisonous and Sylvain Filion cut the mile and posted an opening half of :55.3. Around the final turn, driver Randy Waples sent Split The House first up and the public's choice powered up to the leader at the three-quarter pole in 1:23.2. In the stretch, Split The House cruised by Poisonous and paced home effortlessly to win by two and three-quarter lengths in 1:50.2. Rockin In Heaven, the first leg winner, rallied to finish second, while Mr Carrotts was third. Poisonous finished in a dead-heat for fourth with Rustys Overload.

Following the race, Waples said the first up trip was no issue for Split The House.

"He was well in hand tonight. He's just a really nice horse and it worked out somewhat good," said Waples. "I did have speed to chase, but he was more than willing to be sitting out there and head of the lane there I asked him to pace and he was gone."

A son of Rocknroll Hanover, Split The House was undefeated in three starts heading into the Pepsi North America Cup eliminations, but failed to make the final after a fourth-place finish. The Dean trainee also finished fourth in the consolation, but has now quickly rebounded with a pair of victories.

Waples said the North America Cup didn't go as planned, but he has full confidence in Split The House.

"In my estimation he's one of the best three-year-olds out there, it's just the truth," said Waples. "He was kind of misbehaving a little bit behind the gate [in the North America Cup] and 'Friday' put a screen on him and he's just a different horse now. The last couple of weeks he seems like he's turned a corner."

The impressive victory in the Summertime stamps Split The House as one of the top three-year-olds locally and Waples believes the colt deserves another crack at Grand Circuit competition.

"I think he definitely deserves to be with them," he said. "If you've got a good field of horses you can find one to follow and I just think this horse is going to go a big mile before the year is up."

Split The House is owned by Dean, Scott Horner and Peter Milligan. The sophomore pacing colt now has six wins from eight starts in his first season of racing for earnings of over $77,000.

The clocking of 1:50.2 matched his career-mark set in his third career start. Split The House paid $3.70 to win.

In order to be eligible to the Summertime, the three-year-old pacing colts and geldings had to be non-winners of $30,000 lifetime as of March 31, 2015.

Do over Hanover (Six for Bartlett), "Tailgunner" Wins Elims for Sheppard

By Frank Drucker

Publicity Director, Empire City @ Yonkers Raceway

YONKERS, NY (July 11, 2015) Two-year-olds were prominent Saturday night, with Yonkers Raceway hosting a pair of eliminations for the Lawrence B. Sheppard Pace.

A baker's dozen worth of plebes went it at in their $25,000 elims, with the first four finishers in each back for next Saturday's (July 18) $107,500 finale.

Jason Bartlett, who won half the evening's dozen races, included wagering choice Do Over Hanover ($5) among that list. The pole-sitting, $25,000 Western Ideal colt won the evening's first elimination, defeating first-starter Gleneagles (George Brennan) by 3¾ lengths in a maiden-breaking 1:56.1. Second and third choices Autotone Hanover (Tyler Buter) and Rodeo Rock (Dan Dube) both survived breaks—and a judges' inquiry—to finish third and fourth, respectively.

For Do Over Hanover, trained by Jim Campbell for co-owners Jeffrey & Michael Snyder and Robert Unice, it was that first career win in a couple of starts. The exacta paid $37.60, with the triple returning $143.

The second elimination saw Joe Larry N Curly (Brennan), sent off at 1-10 odds and the reason show wagering was taken off the table, fail to get the memo. He jumped it off wildly leaving the gate, winding up distanced.

That left Tailgunner Hanover (Ray Schnittker, $23.40) in a race by himself, doing his business—from post No. 6—from an open lead. He won by 6¼ lengths in an identical (and life-best) 1:56.1. Endeavor (Pat Lachance), Artmagic (Brian Sears) and War-N-Munn (Dube) also earned their way into the final.

For third choice Tailgunner Hanover, a $50,000 Well Said colt co-owned (with Joe Sbrocco, Frank Baldassare and Howard Taylor) by his trainer/driver, it was his second win in three '15 tries. The exacta paid $130, with the triple returning $544.

Saturday's pair of $48,000 Open Handicaps were won by:

Trot: Red Hot Herbie (catch-driver Bartlett, $9) in 1:55;

Pace: P H Supercam (Bartlett, $3.90) in 1:51.3.

Note that since no one took down Saturday's Pick 5, Monday night's gimmick—already with a $10,000 guaranteed pool—begins with a carryover of $4,726.64 (50-cent base wager, races 7 through 11).

Jeff Gural Responds to Criticism

While I promised myself that I would not comment on all the criticism I receive from the industry, as it would take too long, I have decided to briefly comment on several letters that you published last Sunday.

I do not mind Howard Taylor disagreeing with me but to say that my agenda is to do away with harness racing is a little over the top.

I started going to the track when I was 17 which is 56 years ago. I have owned horses since 1971 and currently I own all or part of 49 horses that are in training. I have two breeding farms, own 50 mares, three harness tracks and I spend about 100 days a year watching and wagering on live harness racing at one of my tracks. I may be the only person in the industry who manages to lose money wagering, lose money breeding, lose money owning standardbreds and lose money owning harness racetracks. Obviously, it would be nice to reverse that. My best chance is to get a casino license at Tioga and the Meadowlands as I doubt if my handicapping skills are likely to improve at my age and like most owners and breeders I lose money but love the challenge and the thrill of having a horse I own or bred win a race.

As far as Joe Fusco's complaint about not getting a refund, the facts are that he transferred the horse from Gilbert Garcia-Herrera's barn to Kevin McDermott's barn but unfortunately the horse has been racing poorly for both trainers. I am sure had that not been the case he would have had Kevin enter the horse in the Meadowlands Pace but since the horse is racing badly he thinks he is entitled to a refund. If that were the policy it would enable almost anyone who has an underachieving horse staked to one of our major races to simply transfer the horse to a trainer who is not approved and then ask for a refund.

I thought my friend Murray Brown's comments about Pennsylvania's efforts regarding equine drug detection may be a little bit of wishful thinking based on the fact that so many of the trainers that we do not allow seem to have found a home in Pennsylvania and are doing quite well.

I will look into the possibility of racing Sunday as Alan Gatto suggested but I do not think there are enough horses around for us to race three days a week even if we carded all Freehold races but I will certainly analyze it.

Lastly, Joel Kravet's story reminds me of my youth in the 60's and driving to Liberty Bell just to get more action. As we are now in the heart of the stakes season hopefully we will get lucky with the weather and I encourage everyone in the industry who has not been to the New Meadowlands to come out and watch the races in person as it will remind you a little bit of the good ol' days when we had people in the grandstand. It still is not what I had hoped for but it is getting better and I remain optimistic that eventually there will be a casino at the Meadowlands. It is just taking longer than I had hoped.

In Support of Gural

Talk about wanting it both ways. I wish Howard Taylor would enlighten the rest of us as to how we can improve harness racing at the Meadowlands! Nobody is laughing at Jeffrey Gural and there is deep concern over the future of this sport. I have seen cheap claiming horses from Delaware wind up winning in 1:50:0 at Pocono after claims, and then disappear 2 months later! Maybe the rest of us are fools, but please enlighten us as to how these results are possible? The ONLY problem with harness racing is that ALL tracks do not operate like Mr. Gural and instead they 'turn the other stifle' so to speak, and allow EGREGIOUS drugging violators to return and prosper, and these same OWNERS who support these offenders continue to do deleterious harm to this great equine sport. There should be a ZERO tolerance to ANY medication whatsoever in harness racing, aside for lasix for bleeders.....PERIOD! The days of 'training' horses are now limited to a certain select few true horsemen still out there. The rest rely on 'better racing through chemistry' to achieve their success. It's not about shoeing techniques, or bridles, or hopple lengths, or any other equipment changes for the most part. We ALL know the score. It's time to REACT to it, and that is what Jeffrey Gural has tried to do. I wish all of the other jurisdictions would follow his lead and clean up this problem once and for all for the overall good of the sport but the silence from other racino tracks is deafening on this matter. Jeffrey Gural went out on a limb to save the premiere harness racing venue in the entire North American continent. If not for the obvious reasons that Governor Christie, Sweeney, and that BOGUS pre-ordained Hanson report concluded, there would and should be a racino right now at the Meadowlands. New Jersey politicians had better get their acts together on this matter now, for anyone with a brain knows the REAL reason for the delay of the 'inevitable' Hard Rock Racino at the Meadowlands.

How Can You Fire a King?

I'm disappointed, if not perplexed, over the Pocono Downs decision to fire George Anthony. I have known George for several years, and he has always been fair, cordial, respectful, and deeply committed to excellence.

I have to believe that there were simply more than just personality conflicts for quite sometime between George Anthony and Dale Rapson. If George was embarrassed publicly on the set in his studio by management, as he claimed, it was the wrong place and the wrong time for this to happen. These things can and should be handled more professionally by management.

If it was simply about George helping to get Brian Sears a discounted room at a local hotel, that would not appear to be grounds for dismissal. If it was simply because George uses nicknames for drivers, that would not appear to be grounds for dismissal. I, for one, LIKE the driver nicknames. It makes the broadcast "fun." He also used driver nicknames at Ocean Downs with no problems.

After George Anthony mysteriously disappeared from the Pocono Downs simulcast, I called the track to see what happened, and someone surmised he may have been "sick." That, as we now know, is untrue.

I would like to hear Dale Rapson's side of the story before passing total judgment. In the meantime, until we hear a better explanation from Dale Rapson, the demise of George Anthony at Pocono Downs appears to have been unjustified.

Those Were The Days

I enjoy reading Joel Kravet's travels back in time to the days when harness racing ruled the night in New York City. Apparently, in our youth, we shared both the same emotional attachment to harness racing and a close physical presence as he described his regular location at Yonkers Raceway which was not many feet from my regular spot. In the '60s, more than 10,000 New Yorkers would cram into Yonkers every weekday night, so it is not unusual that regulars in neighboring sections would not cross paths. I sat in section 7 of the lower mezzanine, just above the concrete steps. My nights did not allow much time for socializing. I was too busy handicapping, watching workouts, checking out the odds, waiting on the betting lines, watching races, watching replays -- and of course, waiting on the collecting lines.

I enjoyed his story about the mudder, Yankee Mick, and his trips to Liberty Bell and Blue Bonnets. While that name does not ring a bell, I had my own list of mudders that caused me to leave the confines of my cozy dwelling and venture out to drive on the nights where the weather conditions made the driving conditions the worst. My trusty Plymouth Road Runner (meep-meep) always got me to the track on time.

Cooperation is Key

As a bettor and a fan of the sport, I feel compelled to weigh in on some of the current "Gural" issues. Unfortunately, as Mr. Taylor noted, Mr. Gural cannot possibly fill the entry box if he continues to ban trainer after trainer. I applaud his effort as a fan and bettor, though. However, it's just simple logic given the number of horses available due to competition from slot tracks and the declining foal crop, the Meadowlands will continue to suffer dramatically.

Mr. Gural's ultimate goal I'm sure is to make money via a future casino. However, he clearly loves the sport too. No one would possibly go through the aggravation and stress, especially at his age, if he didn't care. If Mr. Gural only cared about a casino as Mr. Taylor implies, than why ban trainers, hire a private back stretch detective, build a 100 + million dollar new facility, and do a multitude of promotions to get people out to track? If the casino was the only goal, why not just focus attention on lobbyists and politicians in Trenton? The guy does care, it's just he bumping heads with the "establishment."

I do have to voice my support though for owners who have not had their stake payments refunded. In the case of the Chris Oakes trotting mares, I do feel he should at least get his staking money back. Banishment from the series, and or race, is punishment enough. The only way an owner should not get his staking money refunded is if he was told at the time of initial payment that the horse would have to be moved and the said owner ignored the warning.

As for other issues, I've personally always thought the Meadowlands could use a June break. Even in the tracks better days, the product always suffered when all the top drivers and horses left to follow the stake circuit. As for Mr. Gural's quandary of money for stakes races or overnights, I suggest he goes with the overnights. Keep the tracks signature races and big days, but eliminate the early year stakes and the winter series, which don't even draw enough horses for multiple divisions anymore. As a bettor, I will take a competitive 15k claimer over a stakes race that is comprised of the same big stables albeit with different trainers (Gural rule) with short odds.

The saddest part of all in harness racing is that things really could be fixed with cooperation. Uniform medication rules, whipping rules, and on track rules (pylon violations, kicking, etc.) should be the same everywhere. Why a whip in one state differs from another or Bute or Amicar is allowed on race day in this state, but not that state makes no sense whatsoever. Every year tracks should try and coordinate their schedules. It's not just good for the customers, but for them too. Can anyone explain why not a single harness track runs Saturday afternoons in the summer after Freehold closes? As a harness fan, with the exception of Belmont day, Adios day, and Hambo day not one track runs Saturday afternoons until Freehold reopens in late August. I know it's tough to tackle the Tbreds, but come on! I believe I saw 5 tracks running Sunday afternoon. Wouldn't it be logical for one of those tracks to run Saturday and have the market all to themselves instead of cannibalize each other on Sunday afternoon or Saturday night? Trainer reciprocity should also be uniform. If a trainer abuses horses physically or via PEDs and is suspended in one state, it's ridiculous that he could be licensed in another. Everyone deserves their day in court and a right to due process, but if one is found guilty it has to be enforced everywhere.

As a side note, I do find it amusing that Mohegan Sun at Pocono will allow any trainer to race at their facility. I think Pocono Downs has the highest percentage of current or former suspended trainers anywhere in the universe. In a sad way, the races are actually more even since almost every trainer has been or is under suspicion of abusing or drugging their horses. I'm expecting Seldon Ledford, Richard Chansky, and the Summersby Stable to make their returns to Pocono one day in the future..... I would hope all the funding that Murray Brown claims is going to PED testing is being spent at Pocono. I find it amusing when everyone wonders why the times are so fast there.

Taylor Shot at Gural Off Base

I am annoyed immensely by two letters and one news item recently published in HRU. David Perry's interpretation of the Scott Zeron drive in the NA Cup is way off base. Howard Taylor's shot at Jeff Gural is highly misguided. The renaming of the Merrie Annabelle should have been avoided.

Regarding David Perry's original letter, he makes two grave errors. One, he questions the integrity of Scott Zeron and connections when he, David, totally misconstrues Scott's comments after his losing drive on Artspeak in the NA Cup elim. If you're going to slam someone for an alleged quote, you have the obligation to cite a specific quotation. Perry just unfairly paraphrases his version of what Scott said. I share Perry's frustration with the effort sometimes shown in sham elims where, for example, a favorite with an outside post needs only to finish in the top five of six horses to make the final. Zeron never said anything like, "Well, we were saving him for the big one next week," or "His hoof was a bit sore so we did not even train him this week." Likewise, trainer Tony Alagna in his post-race comments. Artspeak lost because Wakizashi Hanover went airborne with a 25 and a piece final quarter. Two, if you look closely at the replay of the elim and also of the final, it's clear that Zeron made a full effort to win the elim and final and that his horse just was beaten in both races by sharper horses. Perry makes the mistake of taking Zeron's comment that the focus is now toward the final and equates that with a "lack of integrity" and goes on to write that Zeron "could care less about...the betting public." Perry's reaction to both the Zeron remarks and the video of the race make no sense; in fact, they amount to character assassination. Lastly on this matter, in responding last week to a logical rebuttal of his original post by one Pat Wiand, Perry resorts to shots against the Obama administration. Listen, when I read HRU or any other racing publication, the last thing I and most readers want to deal with is any kind of political psycho-babble, be it on the left or the right. It just doesn't belong there.

With reference to Howard Taylor's comments about Jeff Gural, he writes in sentence one of paragraph two, "Jeff Gural has an agenda. It appears his agenda is to do away with harness racing as a nuisance and to concentrate on his casino." Yet, at the start of his last paragraph, he writes, "I do believe that Jeff is trying to do the right thing for harness racing." Now, I did not go to law school and thus was never "trained to think like a lawyer," but are not those two sentences illogical when placed in the same brief letter; in fact, are they not mutually exclusive? Also, Howard writes that "the list of horsemen denied racing privileges at Gural owned tracks is longer than that of those allowed to participate." If Howard's not just using hyperbole here, he should furnish the lists. There is no doubt in my mind that the ratio is at least ten or more to one in favor of those welcome at the Gural tracks. I respect all the money that Howard and his father have put into the game over the years, but I suspect as a defense attorney it's rather hard for him to see things from the fan's perspective regarding integrity. Mr. Gural isn't running a criminal trial where overwhelming evidence is required; he's trying to protect the public and at times has to make very difficult judgement calls. It's not easy playing Solomon. If you read the Paulick Report, it's amazing to learn how often T-bred insiders and fans bemoan the lack in their game of a leader with Mr. Gural's integrity and guts.

Lastly, I applaud the idea of honoring Hall of Famer Jim Doherty. At the same time I think it is most unsound to rename the Merrie Annabelle and thus disrespect her memory and the great tradition of the race. I'm sure there were other lesser stakes that could have been renamed, or how about the Jim Doherty Trophy to be given to the driver of the race or given for some other honor. Jim's accomplishments were many, but as time marches on, based on this precedent, what traditions will be lost as races are renamed after other equally deserving legends in Meadowlands history--think Campbell, O'Donnell, Manzi, Remmen, Takter, Hollywood Heyden, original GM Bob Quigley, and at least ten to twelve others? When Duke University wanted to honor revered basketball coach Mike Krzyzewski, they did not disrespect the memory of longtime former coach and AD, Eddie Cameron, and thus rename legendary Cameron Indoor Stadium after Coach K. Instead they kept the stadium name and named the court Coach K Court. Messing with your history is not a good idea.

Tired of Wrist Slaps

I enjoy your publication and I really am a fan of Harness Racing. I especially like the articles that address the frauds, cheaters and dishonest people who put a bad spin on the industry. I would really like to see more in the way of transparency as I feel like it is difficult to obtain current and up to date information about incidents, investigations and outcomes. One thing in particular that I really do not see being addressed is when these dishonest and cheating individuals get caught doing something against the rules, they are being slapped with a small fine, suspension and sometimes purse monies are to be returned. What I feel is being missed is the amount of tax-free dollars that they stole when the bet on their horses knowing they would do well because of the illegal substance they administered. I feel comfortable saying that in many cases they made a great deal of money thus making the fine and suspension insignificant. I am not saying I am personally aware of a situation where this has occurred, but I was not born yesterday and I am sure that in these cases there are owners, trainers, drivers and anyone else affiliated with these people that are profiting from their illicit ways. On the USTA website I review the weekly fines and suspensions and just shake my head as I see these trainers(some very often) being fined for a horse that finished first and was found to have been under the influence of an illegal drug. I feel that these trainers are the ones having the last laugh as they find it a small price to pay to be the recipient of a large tax-free windfall when they bet on these horses. One more issue that still makes no sense to me is the lack of reciprocation in enforcing a driver or trainer who has been suspended in one jurisdiction and allowed to race in others while suspended elsewhere. In addition, drivers and trainers who are banned in one jurisdiction and allowed to race in others. I do not care if it is a public or private entity, not having this reciprocation is sending a clear message, feel free to cheat somewhere as you will always have another place to set up business. I am a college-educated man who is far from a rocket scientist so I do not understand how and why these things I have just discussed are allowed to take place each and everyday.

I thank you for your time and hope you might share some feedback with me at some point.
