

Forest City Yearling Sale Down 37.5 Per Cent After Day One

By Greg Gangle

LONDON, Ontario--The first session of the Forest City Yearling Sale, which took place in London, Ont., concluded with a decrease of 37.5 per cent compared to one year ago. A total of 119 yearlings were sold today, totaling $1,802,500, while averaging $15,147.

Machme To The Moon was the sale-topper at Forest City (Tarahills.com)

Last year on day one, 123 yearlings were sold for a total of $3,021,500 and an average of $24,565.

"We were pleased with the crowd that was here today," said Ann Straatman, President of the Forest City Yearling Sale. "The industry supported our sale as they have in the past and although the numbers were down, I thought we did okay.

"At the end of the day, I'm somewhat relieved because it could have been worse than what it was because of the ongoing issues with the Government in our industry," Straatman continued. "We'll now turn the page and get ready for tomorrow."

The Forest City sale fared better than Canadian Yearling Sale held last month. That was down 49.4 percent on the opening day.

Machme To The Moon was the sale topper at $85,000 for new owner Dennis Searles of York, Ontario

Bred by Tara Hills Stud and consigned by Preferred Equine, Machme To The Moon, a Mach Three colt, is the second foal by Carolina Moon, who banked $206,180 in her career.

"As an individual, he was a very strong, mature horse and very correct," David Reid of Preferred Equine said. "He's a Mach Three, which never hurts. He's from a strong family and he certainly was bred to sell well."

Reid said he remained confident about the potential high price that Machme To The Moon might offer.

"You never know how well they are going to sell until they actually sell," Reid said. "I was confident he was one of the better yearlings to be offered today and I'm certainly not surprised that he was the sale topper."

Straatman, who is also the Owner and Manager of Seelster Farms of Lucan, Ont., sold 21 yearlings today and will sell 53 total. Nirvana Seelster, a full brother to last year's sale topper, Nitro Seelster ($175,000), sold as the second highest price of the day to agent David Menary of Cheltenham, Ont for $77,000.

"He was as close to a perfect horse as we've ever sold," Straatman said. "Like his full brother from last year, he's exactly what we would be striving for. He's a high quality, athletic looking horse and looks very much like his older brother. He's a very smart, intelligent horse, who I think has a very bright future."

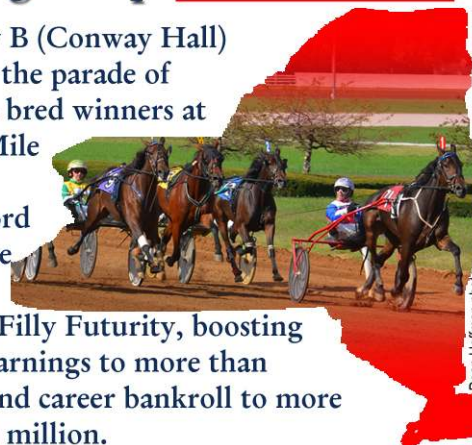

No. 3 on the list went to Tara Seelster, a Kadabra filly that sold for $75,000. She was bought by John Kopas.

Despite the uncertainty of racing in Ontario in the future, Straatman was pleased with her overall consignment after day one. "As a consigner, you're always nervous on sale day, especially this year because of no word on the commitment to funding to racing for next year," she said. "We take great pride in our consignment this year, as we often do in the past. With our two new stallions, Federal Flex and Artistic Fella, offering their first crops, we are very excited to present them."

The sale will continue tomorrow with hips 128-287 selling starting at noon.

Michael's Power Will Supplement To Crown
By Bill Finley

Little Brown Jug winner Michael's Power will be supplemented to the Breeders Crown at a cost of $62,500, owner Jeff Snyder has confirmed. The decision came just a day after the Camluck gelding finished second in an OSS Gold race at Flamboro.

"It was not an easy decision to pony up the fee," Snyder said. "Actually, in all the years it 's the first time for me. There were a couple of good reasons which tipped the scales. No. 1, the horse deserves a shot. No. 2, he is sound and fresh. Despite the long season he has had he seems really good. Last night after being pressured by Warawee Needy he paced a back half of 54 and a piece on a really cold night in Canada. The mile in 1:51 and change on a half-mile track cutting it, I thought was big. No. 3, we intend to race Michael's Power next year, so if we supplement now he will be eligible for all future Crowns. No. 4, if all goes well we think he has a shot to win."

Snyder's decision may also have a big impact on the 3-year-old pacing championship, which remains wide open. Though the Jug winner, Michael's Power seemed to have little chance at the title had he not started in the Breeders Crown.

In addition to his win in the Jug, Michael's Power won the Confederation Cup and numerous Ontario-bred races this year. His 2012 record is 13 wins from 17 starts with earnings of $1,311,912.

Driver Scott Zeron

HRU: What is your take on Michael's Power's performance Friday night at Flamboro?

SZ: Even tough he got beat, take nothing away from him because Mel Mara stepped up big time and raced great. I had to do a little bit of work on the front end and he got the best of me; he had a two-hole trip and shot up the inside down the lane. We had an amazing back half in 54 and it was a really cool night. My horse was off three weeks since the Jug. He was sound as he's ever been and I am looking forward to his next race.

HRU: How big a factor has Casie Coleman been in your emergence?

SZ: She's been probably the biggest thing in my career thus far. The best decision I ever made was at the beginning of year I committed to all her horses. She runs a tight operation with some of the best horses in North America. To be affiliated with her has been a perfect situation for me.

HRU: Both you and Doug McNair have done very well on the WEG circuit despite your youth. How do you explain that both of you have matured so quickly?

SZ: We have had to mature quickly; we race with 40 and 50-year-old guys on a nightly basis. We blend right in with them. They have taught us a lot and that's how we better ourselves

HRU: What has it meant to your career to be competing in so many Grand Circuit race?

SZ: This year I have had the best of both worlds, Casie's pacers and Frank Antonacci's trotters. Everything fell into place great for me this year. I've been able to get noticed in the States by winning some big races, which is exactly what I needed to improve next year.

HRU: Do you expect you'll be driving full-time in the U.S. next year?

SZ: I think I will. It's somewhere I want to be in my future anyway. With the problems in Ontario maybe taking their toll, I might make the change earlier than I wanted to. You're definitely going to so me going down there, hopefully, in January.

Why Do Bettors Have to Pay For Red Mile DQ?

Regardless of how you feel about the 'infamous' DQ at Lexington, the incident shows one thing, it is time to keep the gambler out of equation when it comes to all but the most obvious infractions. There is no reason to penalize bettors when there is any doubt as to who is to blame for a possible infraction.

If there is interference, violation of the breaking rule, or incidents such as hooked wheels where the infraction has an impact as to the finish of the race and blame can be easily determined, by all means the judges should make the disqualification prior to the race going official, but when the infraction has no impact on the outcome of the race or responsibility can't be determined immediately, then interview (and tape) the drivers immediately after the race and announce the race is official for pari-mutuel purposes and after the day's races are completed, have the judges fully investigate the suspected infraction and, if appropriate, make the necessary placing(s). Some may say we can't have disqualifications take place after the race is official. My question is why not? In the case of medication violations, the official order of finish is changed.

Gamblers should be impacted by disqualifications as infrequent as possible. Unless an obvious infraction takes place, the original order should remain official for horseplayers. Racing participants have the luxury of appealing a decision if they disagree with the judges' decision while the horseplayer has no recourse if a bad call is made. Therefore, it is racing's responsibility to do no harm to the horseplayer when an infraction and/or blame are not easily discernible .

On Heats...Times Have Changed

I have to admit that at one time I was a huge fan of heat racing. The first time I was disappointed by the horses not coming back for a second heat was eons ago at a county fair.

Not so much a fan anymore.

As a horse owner, I see what stresses Standardbreds endure on a daily basis, and mine are only retrained as saddle horses.

The breed just isn't developed anymore for multiple heats on the same day. Eliminations the week before? Yes. Second and/or third heats on the same day? No. Stakes horses that travel North America just aren't the same as their ancestors. I have no doubt they still have the heart and determination, but the bone structure and muscle tissue can no longer hold up to the type of pounding that an additional heat or two can muster.

Hardline race fans will hang on to the tradition bit until it yanks their teeth out. But I don't believe younger race fans/bettors, who are addicted to the quick fix sporting events, will cling as hard to harness racing.

It appears trainers aren't supporting the traditional format-ditto for the catch drivers also. If you read what Mr. Schnittker said about his talented filly Check Me Out before the Filly Kentucky Futurity, and Mr. Tetrick's quote in The Red Mile's winners circle that "he's not a fan" of heat racing, you'll better understand my point of view. If you don't get the horses or drivers, how can heat racing continue?

Times have changed. Often times that's not fair but, what else can you do?

Thanks,
Tim Jones

Don't Baby 'Em

The Washington Nations babied their ace pitcher Stephen Strasburg, and look where it got them? Throwing inferior pitchers at the St. Louis Cardinals, they got bounced from the baseball playoffs.

What does this have to with harness racing? The Nationals used the same mentality that so many trainers are now employing with their horses—less is more? Nonsense. The standardbred is among the toughest horses on the planet and they have always been able to go two, three heats in a day. Check Me Out didn't win the Kentucky Filly Futurity because her trainer was intent on babying her and it may just cost her Horse of the Year.

Alex Morris (King of the 10-cent super)

And Dean Hoffman Says...

(Editor's Note: Just for fun we asked Hall of Fame scribe Dean Hoffman to weigh in on the great heats debate)

I recall owner-breeder Barry Goldstein telling me that he felt that the two heats of Kentucky Futurity really transformed Arch Madness into a much better horse in 2007. He just got better and wound up beating Donato Hanover in the Breeders Crown. Per Eriksson told me that the two heats of the Hambletonian really elevated Alf Palema and made him a better horse. That's an interesting perspective.

Ivan Sugg was commenting on No Pan Intended winning the Jug and he said that heat racing didn't bother him. He told me that every horse he'd ever raced could go faster the second heat than the first heat. And I don't think No Pan Intended paid the price later for racing heats in the Jug.

Heat racing adds an element of drama to harness racing. I asked a notable person to name the best and most memorable harness races he'd ever seen and they were all heat races. I'd probably say the same about the most dramatic races I've seen---with the exception of the March of Dimes Trot in 1988.

No, we're not going back to four-heat Hambos, but I think heat racing adds an element of drama to harness racing's classic events.

CORRECTION: Due to the fact that no one on our staff speaks Finnish or Swedish, something got lost in the translation in our story on Saturday on Commander Crowe. We identified the gelding's former trainer as Snogarps Gard, which is the stable name for owner Calle Wihlborg. His former trainer is Petri Puro. Vi ar ledsnä. (That's, we are sorry in Swedish...We think).

Kims Royal Day (Billy Davis Jr, $9.90) inherited the lead past the quarter after the 3/5 favorite broke, set the fractions under some mild pressure at the half, turned that rival away and drew off in hand by 4-3/4 lengths in 1:56.3.

Eloge (Simon Allard) chased the winner from the pocket and was no match. Macharoundtheclock (Scott Zeron) broke stride past the quarter after leaving to the front, recovered in eighth, sat there until the stretch and rallied with late pace to get up for third after a nightmare beginning.

Windsong Jack (Randy Waples, $3.10) fired out and was parked going to the lead at the quarter, rated the half while fending off first over pressure, got asked for more in the stretch and responded to just hold off the late surging Ok Fantastic (Dan Clements) by a nose in 1:54.3. Mach Pride (Anthony MacDonald) left to the front, yielded to the winner at the quarter, sat the pocket trip throughout but had no punch when asked and weakened to third.
