Charmed Existence

Mere moments from being euthanized after serious injuries as a foal, Woodside Charm survived and went on to win the 2018 Dan Patch Award for freshman trotting filly of the year.

by James Platz

Woodside Charm will be honored in ceremonies Sunday (Feb. 24) at the Rosen Shingle Creek in Orlando, FL as the sport's top freshman filly trotter. However, long before she won the Breeders Crown and locked up the Dan Patch Award for her division, chances were slim the Chapter Seven filly would make it to the races. In fact, Lester Beechy, who raised the foal out of Fireworks Hanover, almost gave up on the trotter after an injury and subsequent surgery. Only the advice of vet Jeff King would change his mind... twice.

"There's a point in time where you have to be humane to the animal," said Beechy, who breeds and sells yearlings under the name of Woodside Farm. "If it's too bad, you have to put them down. When you see an animal suffer like that, it just breaks your heart."

Beechy was contemplating this difficult decision when Woodside Charm was just a weanling. After purchasing Fireworks Hanover, dam of millionaire and world champion Explosive Matter, at the Harrisburg sale in foal to Chapter Seven, he welcomed the filly in May 2016 at his Wolcottville, IN farm. He described her as good natured, friendly and very athletic. Over the July 4 holiday, Beechy and his family headed west for a trip to Colorado, not knowing that when they returned, the trouble with this promising baby would begin.

"That's a good time for us to go on a little vacation. We had one of the neighbors keep an eye on the mares," the breeder said. "The mares are all bred back and there's plenty of pasture. As long as they've got water and grass, they kind of take care of themselves."

Upon returning home, Beechy inspected the herd, which typically includes between 10 to 15 mares and their foals. During that inspection, he noticed puss on the leg of the months-old Woodside Charm.

"I saw a little puss oozing off this filly's cannon bone. I caught the mare and brought her in and saw right away she had a little break in the skin," Beechy recalled. "It didn't look like anything serious. I put her on medication for the weekend, and Monday morning I called my vet."

King, who is also owner of Victory Hill Farm with his wife, Maria, arrived to inspect the filly, and found it required a closer look. He did not have an x-ray machine on the truck, so he returned the next day. Upon further review, Woodside Charm had sustained a small slab fracture to her cannon bone. It is unknown how the injury occurred, but the breeder surmises another foal or mare likely kicked the filly while in the pasture.

"She had a piece in there about an inch and a half in length," he said. "It was just a very tiny sliver, but he (King) said it's got to come out."

Beechy sent the filly to a clinic to have the fracture addressed. The primary surgeon was on leave, so a replacement performed the procedure. The result made a bad situation worse.

"About two weeks later, he called me and said the filly was ready to come back home. She came home with an open wound with exposed cannon bone, which was very nasty,” said Beechy. “That just really, really upset me. Here I had a filly that I thought could be something. With an exposed cannon bone you always think about getting an infection in the bone. It was horrible.”

The breeder again reached out to King. After inspecting the trotter, he suggested she could be treated at Woodside Farm, and he would check in on her each day to track the progress. A few weeks in, however, Beechy felt he was at a crossroads. Not seeing much progress, concerned about infection, and feeling that the filly was suffering, he suggested euthanizing the baby. He had a gut feeling things would continue to go south and not end well.

“She was three months old at that time. We keep bandaging and medicating. She wasn’t in a lot of pain, but there was discomfort there,” the breeder said. “I guess it wore me down just to see her. It’s not like she was in a lot of distress, but it was painful for me. One day I said, ‘Jeff, why don’t you just put this filly down and get her out of her misery.’ He walked around her and looked at me and said, ‘Lester, are you sure? She could be a broodmare, even though you won’t ever be able to sell her.’”

King had talked Beechy out of putting Woodside Charm down. He would keep her as a new addition to his broodmare band. But King’s influence on the filly’s career was not over. Fast forward to the next year, and the veterinarian was again at Woodside Farm, this time for Coggins tests on babies Beechy had consigned to the Hoosier Classic Yearling Sale. While there, King inquired about the filly.

“He asked, ‘How’s that filly doing?’ I said, ‘Well, she looks good. She’s healthy and she bounces around, she trots nice,’” Beechy said. “I brought her in and he looked at her and said, ‘You have to give this filly a shot.’ I asked, ‘Do you really think it’s worth it?’ He said, ‘Of course. If you can work something out with a trainer, give her a shot. She needs a shot.’”

Enter Verlin Yoder. The trainer would stop by the northern Indiana farm to inspect babies leading up to the fall sales. At that time, Beechy asked if he would be interested in taking the filly as a project. He agreed and a deal was struck to entrust him with the trotter. At Christmas, Yoder told the breeder that while the filly showed ability, it was unlikely she would make it to the races. His message: book her to breed in 2018.

“He said, ‘She will never be a racehorse. She favors that leg and she dog tracks and I can’t get her to trot straight.’ He tells me that she shows all kinds of talent, but she’ll always hit that shin and never go straight,” the breeder said. “She favored that leg long enough, and that’s how she walked, on a little bit of an angle trying to protect it. He had to teach her that the leg was okay and she didn’t need to favor it.”

In just a few short months, the message from Yoder changed. Woodside Charm favored the leg less and less, and by March, he instructed Beechy to forgo breeding the filly. Instead, he would try his hand at racing her. The rest, as they say, is history. Woodside Charm would go on to win each of her seven freshman starts, setting a world record before handily winning the $600,000 Breeders Crown final with Yoder in the sulky. The filly, once thought unable to race, finished the season with $521,658 in earnings.

“It was always exciting to see when she was entered in a race, where she would draw, and see what’s in there with her. When post time came you held your breath for two minutes and hope you don’t pass out,” Beechy said with a laugh when describing the 2018 campaign. “I think it’s just awesome that a small guy like that can be part of the big game and be competitive. Everybody thinks you have to have a stable of 100 horses to be successful, and that’s just not true.”

Beechy will not be in Orlando to celebrate Woodside Charm’s Dan Patch Award. He will be home in Indiana, awaiting Fireworks Hanover’s latest foal, a trotter from the first crop of Dover Dan. He will breed her back to Chapter Seven this year, hoping for another good result. In the future, he looks forward to the day when Woodside Charm returns to his farm to join the broodmare band. He’s glad that his gut feelings were proven wrong.

Ernie Hendry suffers most in Atlanta squabble

by Ron Gurfein

Tidbits: The night of the Atlanta auction I lay in bed thinking about one thing: the caretaker and assistant trainer. Ernie Hendry I truly feel for you. You are the biggest victim. I could only relate the situation to Continentalvictory and her wonderful caretaker Marita Berglund. In this type of circumstance she would have been devastated. The only thing I can say to Ernie is a quote from Alfred Lord Tennyson, “‘Tis better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all.” They can remove the horse but in no way can they remove the experience or the memories. I only wish that you have a great one this year.

The reaction to my Rick Zeron column (full story here) followed party lines, or should I say country lines. Most of the Canadian responses were defending the commission and frying me for being so “naive.” Ninety-five per cent of the Americans were very supportive of my description of the events and were very alarmed at the severity of the punishment. What all this means is beyond my pay grade, so I leave it to you to figure it out.

Ronnie Burke finally gets his Hambletonian winner albeit after the fact. However, he inherits the mess and is faced with a lose-lose situation. If she races well, of course, she is the Great Mare Atlanta, she was always great, but if she doesn’t race well, Ronnie did a lousy job. I personally would have liked to see her in a smaller barn with less tumult. I think mares get stressed from too much action and a lack of quiet. These are some of the most dominant problems with mares tying up. When you have a high profile horse it is imperative that you are by her side and that will prove very hard in her new home.

There has been talk that some of the mares will retire. If they don’t, what an exciting year ahead. On a much lighter note:

I really love some horsepeople quotes on Facebook recently that I would like to share with you. Mary Perry, “I saw an attractive man spank his kid at McDonalds when he threw his fries on the ground, so I also threw mine on the ground.” “When I dunk my cookies I think of you and hold them under till the bubbles stop”

Uncredited, “Since the snow came all the wife does is look through the window... if it gets any worse I will have to let her in.”

By far the cutest from Nancy Johansson, “Whenever I weigh myself I always subtract 10 pounds. I don’t think Boobs, Brains and an Ass this fabulous should count against me.”

Plus a fun story from the “Magic Man.” Four guys are walking down the street and see a bar that says all drinks 10 cents. They decide to try it out and sit down and order a round. The bartender said, ‘That will be 40 cents, please.’ After a while, the bartender returns and says, ‘Would you like another round the guys?’ All said yes and the bartender poured the drinks and said 40 cents please. One man said to the bartender, ‘How can you afford to sell drinks for a dime?’ to which he answered, ‘I hit the lottery for $125,000,000 and I am enjoying it.’ A moment passes and one guy says how come the people down there at the end of the bar are not drinking and the bartender replied, ‘Oh, them? They are from Florida. They are waiting for happy hour when the drinks are half price.’”

The possibility of a Duke, Kentucky rematch in the Final Four looks less likely after the Tar Heels blew the Dukies out of Cameron Indoor Stadium mainly due to the loss of Zion Williamson at the 33 second mark of the first half. Coach K says it’s a slight knee bruise, but with a player of his caliber, any bump in the road is serious. My take was the visitors played at a much higher energy level and I have seen complacency on the Duke team often of late. On the other hand, the Cats should be on a major win streak but for an awful call at Rupp with a buzzer beater that was obviously offensive interference. March Madness is on the way.

I got brutally berated for my omissions in the article about driving colonies. Please read carefully before you throw stones. I quoted a gentleman’s question. He named the drivers, not me I was asked to pick what I thought was the greatest talent pool. I make enough mistakes I don't need the wrath of the industry when I did nothing at all. I am friends with Timmy Tetrack and know what a talent he is I even suggest his nomination to the Hall of Fame. If those named were my picks he would certainly be included.

While I am quoting I must thank the noted Ontario attorney Bob Burgess (Blair's dad) for the kind words he bestowed upon my column. "Ron, Congratulations on your fine article this morning on Rick's recurrent miseries with the Ontario horse racing regulators. It seem that they cannot even respond properly to Larry Todd's demand for disclosure on a timely basis. Given the prevailing anti-standardbred bias in Ontario it is not surprising that this Zeron case is still making headlines when only the standardbreds are racing, they seem to save all the bad publicity for us."

Ashley Leslie asks: You mentioned a gentleman (John Patterson, Sr.) showing you why brace bandages we better protection that trotting boots. Could you enlighten me as to why that is we use boots 99 per cent of the time. I don't see much in the line of bandages anymore.

Equipment in this area has sadly changed in the past 50 years. The quality of brace bandage and wraps that were available in the '60s no longer exist. When that started happening I switched to vetrap that was lighter and performed the same service. Back to your original query, Mr Patterson put a boot on one of my arms and a properly made brace bandage over cottons on the other and proceeded to hit me with a mallet to replicate the power of the horses foot. The amount of pain with the boot was far greater than with the bandage.

However, there are more positives to bandages over boots. Boots have a tendency to slide and with dirt under them, they gall the skin. More blood from trotting boots come from irritation than from interference. The boot is thick and with a bandage underneath it's providing a larger surface to hit. I would venture vetrap, with cotton applied properly, will provide a much smaller target for interference. Lastly, the tighter bandage has the ability to widen the colt out behind more than a boot does.

The fact that you don't see them around is because people are lazy. It is much simpler to throw on a boot than properly put cottons and bandages on a shin. I just looked at a montage of photos from 2018 and 90 per cent of the top class trotters wore bandages, though I did notice one of Ake Svanstedt's colts wearing boots.

Todd Rosenberg asks: I have appreciated your restaurant selections in the past. I am a snowbird from Ohio who winters in Lake Worth, do you have any favorites north of Pompano, Boca, Delray or Lake Worth?

I will not rehash the dishes, but my old standbys are still the best: Frank and Dino's, Trattoria Romano, and La Valletta are all excellent. Frank and Dino's is the best value as they have a wonderful happy hour where all drinks are half price and some fabulous appetizers, as well. They also have a live singer many nights.

New York Prime has great food and is a fun scene with two great pianists and good music from early evening. Near you, I would suggest Cafe Savori on Southern Blvd north side of the street just before Washington. Great food, servers and management is wonderful. In Delray I will add Tramonti and Cut 432. A new surprise last week was Trattoria Nonna in Boca, a small old fashioned eatery with a lot of charm for a strip mall eatery. The food was fabulous as was the service and you can have a great meal without leaving your first born, a feat that is hard to do in many of my favorite Boca establishments.

Hopefully we will hear an end shortly to the Zeron saga. I hear a lot of dribble that he has a lot of money. Ask the Guru, it doesn't last long when you are not working and why let the powers that be sit back and think they did the right thing when it was far more devious than proper. Misunderstanding and innuendo have put the entire process into turmoil. I am sorry for ranting again.

Winning money is thrilling; betting for thrills is chilling

by Frank Cotoledo

This Bettors Banquet (BB) column touches upon an accusation I make about anyone betting pari-mutuels races, especially harness races. Though it is easy to accuse someone of doing something, to prove it is not always an easy chore; not so much in this case, however. I feel confident accusing the majority of bettors of something they are doing; something that impairs their success; and I can prove it.

The accusation is this: Most players bet on too many races to be financially successful. I am talking the raw number of races played, having nothing to do with the amounts bet (yet even wagering the minimum amount on “too many races” will yield losses).

Now, if you are a pari-mutuels bettor, believe me, it will serve your betting future greatly if you provide an honest answer to one question:

“When you wager, what are you chasing — money or a high from winning?”

I bet I would have won a bet that you did not think that was going to be the question. After all, what does that have to do with bettors playing too many races? We will get to that. Foremost, take all the time necessary to answer the question truthfully; understanding that the answer is either “money” or “a high from winning.”

INTERMISSION

If you answered “money,” then the subject of the first two BB columns on playing for profit are important to review (episode 1 here)(episode 2 here), as well as you can learn more about that subject in future BB columns.

If you answered “a high from winning,” thank you for being honest; it is a bettor’s first step walking away from the poor house. Betting just for a high (thrill) of being correct is counter-productive to being successful. Why? First, if your primary need to bet is to produce a thrill, then only cashing a ticket provides the thrill. Receiving a thrill from a win, then, continually drives your betting, so if you are given the chance of being thrilled nine times a night, why would you want the thrill less than nine times? What about being offered the chance 15 times a night? If a thrill is available 15 times a night, what stops you from trying to obtain it 15 times?

If the thrill is always the desired result of wagering, the player’s measure of success is not money made from a wager, it is merely the act of having a ticket to cashing. Danger looms, though, because a thrill is rarely satisfied. It needs constant attention, perpetual presence. What to do?

The solution to the infinite number of thrills needed, then, is to cash more tickets. To cash more tickets, one has to win more races — winning, after all, equals a thrill. These days and nights there is no shortage of races that propose thrills. The volume of available prospects for thrills is sizeable, and in that climate thrill-seekers are doomed, bound to be burned, because no one can successively win enough to survive manufacturing infinite thrills.

Look at the following example of someone playing as many races as possible for thrills over five racing programs. Our fictional player, Delaney, bets (left column) and cashes or not (right column).

Programs Bet Cashes

|---|------|---------|
| 1 | $46 | $12.20 |
| 2 | $26 | $34.40 |
| 3 | $56 | $--00  |
| 4 | $36 | $5.60  |
| 5 | $48 | $20.00 |

Delaney’s bets on every race over five programs, costs him $72.20. That is not the cost of his thrills because over the five programs he wagered $212.00. The cost of his thrills was $139.80 — which is the amount he lost, which is the amount he paid for $72.20 worth of thrills. Each time he cashed wagers his thrill sent him ego-pumping messages like, “You are so good at this game” and “You are great at picking winners,” and “Wow, that felt good, do it again.”

Anyone who wins a wager has the right to be thrilled, but that sensation is flippant, unlike the sound property of money, which is a sound, productive asset.

By contrast, look at the rundown of a week’s plays using specific, selected races, from five days of programs by another fictional player, Ollie.

Programs Bet Cashes

|---|------|----------|
| 1 | $12 | $--00   |
| 2 | $20 | $--00   |
| 3 | $30 | $98.60  |
| 4 | $10 | $--00   |
| 5 | $25 | $175.00 |

Ollie wagered $97.00 over five days, selecting races he thought could make him the most money. He was thrilled when he cashed tickets but ultimate satisfaction came from the financial results of the five-day campaign, which returned $237.60 for his $97.00 worth of bets—a profit of $176.60.

Because he plays for insatiable thrills, Delaney’s losing moments are miserable and demeaning. Because Ollie selects races to play with care and a higher goal than an ego-boosting thrill, he does not flinch when he loses races and can sustain the dreaded losing streaks all bettors suffer.

My accusation is proven — if you wager for inner glory and the thrill of being correct, you are playing too many races. As BB columns ensue, the elements afforded to assist the profit-seeker will be explained to further the strengths of success.

Poillucci looks to double his pleasure in pacing mare division

by Ken Weingartner / USTA media relations manager

Richard Poillucci is looking forward to watching his New Zealand-bred standout Shartin N return to action this season and the 6-year-old Dan Patch Award-winning mare has a new stablemate that Poillucci hopes can keep her company on the stakes trail.

Shartin hit the racetrack for the first time this year on Wednesday (Feb. 13) at Dover Downs, winning a qualifier in 1:56 as she prepares to defend her title in the upcoming Blue Chip Matchmaker Series at Yonkers Raceway. Expected to join Shartin in the series is New Zealand-bred Bettor Joy, who was purchased in December from the Down Under stable of Cran Dalgety and is owned by Poillucci and Jo Ann Looney-King.

Bettor Joy, who is a daughter of Bettor's Delight out of Joyfulbelle, won 10 of 28 races and $215,454 prior to coming to North America. Because of the difference in breeding seasons, Bettor Joy, who was born in October 2014, is considered a 5-year-old in North America as opposed to a 4-year-old in New Zealand.

Shartin, also owned by Poillucci and Looney-King, and Bettor Joy could provide their owners and trainer Jim King Jr. a strong one-two punch in the pacing mare division.

"That's what we hope for, but you never know," Poillucci said. "Bettor Joy is a real good mare. She is just getting started. She raced once at Dover and came up sick on us and finished fourth. We'll probably race her again next week. We're looking for big things from her."

Of course, Poillucci also is looking for big things from Shartin. Last year, she became the first pacing mare to earn $1 million in a season, finishing with $1.05 million thanks to 19 wins in 24 races. Her victories included the Breeders Crown, Roses Are Red, Lady Liberty, Blue Chip Matchmaker Series championship, TVG Series Mare championship, Artiscape, Betsy Ross Invitational, Chip Noble Memorial, and Allerge Farms Mare Pace.

In December, she was named the sport's best older female pacer of 2018 and joined Hall of Famer Cardigan Bay as a "Down Under" import to receive a Dan Patch Award. Cardigan Bay, also from New Zealand, was a two-time honoree (1965 and 1968).

Shartin's connections will accept her Dan Patch Award at the U.S. Harness Writers Association's Dan Patch Awards banquet at Rosen Shingle Creek in Orlando on Feb. 24. The mare remains a top contender for Pacer of the Year and Horse of the Year, which both will be announced at the banquet.

Shartin N (Tim Tetrick) winning the Breeders Crown.

"It was amazing, absolutely amazing," Poillucci said about Shartin's season. "Looking back at what she did, it's surreal trying to take it all in. You know how many people start out in January with horses and to end up the year with a mare that could stay as good as she stayed all year long is mindboggling. She's just a very special mare. If all goes well, I can't see why she can't come back this year and be a top contender again. There is no reason."

Shartin can be a tricky horse to drive, so Poillucci gives credit to Tim Tetrick for playing an integral part in the mare's success. Tetrick has been Shartin's only driver in North America.

"Jim King does a tremendous job as a trainer, but the key is Tim Tetrick," Poillucci said. "Timmy took the time to understand her and learned how to drive her. When she goes to the gate, he really has to work with her. She's aggressive. She's not a mean horse by any means, but when you put her behind the gate she just wants to roll. She just wants to go. Those few bobbles she made last year, those were her trying to outpace herself."

The 2018 season was Shartin's first in North America. Poillucci hopes the mare can build upon last year's performances now that she has become more mature and acclimated to racing here.

"I'm not saying that is going to happen, but that's what you would think," Poillucci said. "We're definitely in the hunt for a good year. I think it can happen. They said she was absolutely just running over horses (in her qualifier). That's a good sign. She doesn't like time off. She wants to race, that's her thing."

"I know it's a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity (to have a horse like her). They don't come along very often like this. I may have a couple of very good ones behind her and I'm hoping for good things, but to say they can do what she does, that's a tough act to follow. It's very rare to find a mare that can do what she does."

Meadowlands Pace winter book should be a wagering event

by Brett Sturman

Approaching the final weeks of winter, it's time to start assessing who will win the sport's big 3-year-old races in the upcoming stakes season. Accordingly, the Meadowlands issued its first 2019 Meadowlands Pace winter book, in which the top 10 Pace prospects were detailed in the following Youtube video:

By the term winter book, what's being described are the wintertime chances, or the chances of horses months in advance to win particular races that don't occur until spring or summer of the following year. The best example of a winter book in horse racing is that of the Kentucky Derby, where odds are offered on horses as early as fall of 2-year-old season for a race that doesn't run until May of the next year. This example also points out the obvious difference between thoroughbred and harness winter books, in that harness racing winter books are merely an exercise to track the contenders for fun, with no actual wagering occurring. This should be changed.

Equating the Kentucky Derby to the Meadowlands Pace or even the North America Cup for that matter, there are plenty of ways to bet Derby contenders months in advance at astronomical odds if one wishes to do so. The most common way is through Derby Future Wager pools, offered intermittently in the months leading up to the big race.

A promotional graphic for Woodbine's Standardbred Pick 4. It features the Woodbine logo (a red circle with a white 'W' and a star) and the word "WOODBINE" in a bold, sans-serif font. Below this, "STANDARD BRED" is written in a smaller font, followed by "PICK 4" in large, bold letters, with the "4" being red. To the right, "$50,000" is displayed in large, bold letters, with "GUARANTEED EARLY PICK 4 EVERY RACE DAY" in smaller text underneath. At the bottom, it says "For more information, visit WoodbineSB.com/Pick4" and includes a small disclaimer: "Know When To Take The Reins. ResponsibleGambling.org TM Trademarks of Woodbine Entertainment Group."

The closest thing that harness racing has to winter book odds is the future wager offered for the Hambletonian, though those pools begin much closer to the Hambletonian race when it's more known who the contenders will be. At that point, much of the value is eliminated that would have been available if the future wagers were offered farther out. There's also future wagering for the Little Brown Jug, though it's counterproductive to make a future wager on an event that ultimately is going to be hugely tilted by a post draw.

Back to the concept of a winter book, one of the reasons that Derby future wagering works is because of the number of horses to choose from. There are hundreds of horses in that sport nominated to the Triple Crown events throughout the time winter book odds are offered, as well as a number of other factors that make predicting a Derby champion months out much more difficult than picking the Meadowlands Pace winner. But that doesn't mean that there wouldn't be any value in offering actual winter book odds for the harness racing's biggest events.

In the Meadowlands winter book for 2018 issued at this exact time last year, the top three favorites included Lost In Time, Stay Hungry and Closing Statement. The horse that won the race, Courtly Choice, wasn't even on the list. Nor should he have been, seeing as that he wasn't even nominated to the race (he supplemented at the time of entry). I'd imagine that Courtly Choice would have offered odds at over 100-1 during the winter time, or if not offered individually, he would have at least comprised the "field" wager.

Courtly Choice may have been a wager impossible to see coming for those other than the horse's connections, but other Pace winners have been far more predictable. In fact, most Pace winners throughout this decade would fit that bill. A Rocknroll Dance, Captaintreacherous, He's Watching and many others are a who's-who of champion 2-year-olds that came back as similar top 3-year-olds to win the Pace. Sticking with Captaintreacherous as an example, he paid an ordinarily formful $3.20 to win the Meadowlands Pace at odds of 3-5. Had real winter book odds been offered on him through a future wager pool, he may have offered odds at 5-1 as the winter book favorite. Now, that number still may not seem like high enough odds considering you'd have to risk an injury or simply not returning to his same form as a 2-year-old, but if your conviction or hunch is strong enough in a horse months out, there's at least the possibility to get paid out on it to a far higher amount than you would come post time. Plus, it would give those who place wagers a chance to more closely follow and track the development of these horses through the winter months and then when they finally return to the track around spring time.

As last year's Meadowlands Pace winner showed though, not all winners of the race are guaranteed to come from crop of the best 2-year-olds. The 2015 winner of the race began that season in a N/W 2 at Dover Downs after only racing a single time previously in August of his 2-year-old season. That horse then went onto race throughout the winter at the Meadowlands in February and March series action for younger horses. His name, if you haven't figured it out yet, is Wiggle It Jiggleit. Throughout the Buddy Gilmour winter series that year was when you could really tell this may be a top-tier horse, and even at that time he may have offered odds of 50-1 in a winter book future wager being completely unproven against all the top freshman stars from 2014.

The Meadowland is in a unique position to now offer such a wager, seeing as it houses its own sportsbook! To accommodate future wagers in the past, there would have to be pari-mutuel pools structured (such as what's offered for the Hambletonian), but now the FanDuel sportsbook at the Meadowlands could theoretically offer odds on any horse that a customer is interested in. Who will win the Meadowlands Pace could be offered immediately right alongside who will win the World Series.

In the just-for-fun winter book of 2019, the #1 rated horse is last year's Breeders Crown and Governor's Cup winner, Captain Crunch. A horse I would be interested in taking a flyer on would be the #9 rated horse, Hurrikane Emperor. As a son of the freakishly fast Hurrikane Kingcole, he was last year's first horse to go sub 1:50 and like his sire, he may have a 1:47 type of mile inside of him coming up this year. I'd say odds of about 30-1 are fair; now there just needs a way to book it.

Prix de Paris and more

by Thomas Hedlund

Prix d'Amérique winner Belina Josselyn (Love You) will enter the third and last of the Grand Prix-races at Vincennes this winter meeting. Jean-Michel Bazire also starts Prix d'Amérique runner up Looking Superb in the $397,000 Prix de Paris, a race contested over 4,150 meters (about 2.6 miles).

Two laps on Vincennes track is a heavy task for the 12 contenders in this year's Prix de Paris. Prix de France winner Ready Express (Ready Cash) is missing since trainer Timo Nurmos and owner Rolf Andersson decided that Ready Express will continue the racing during the spring and then most in mile races, a journey that will end with participation in the Elitloppet at Solvalla at the end of May.

Ready Express was invited to the Elitloppet last year, but the horse's entourage choose to let the Ready Cash son focus on breeding in Sweden. This year, Nurmos has said that Ready Express will start at Solvalla and that the Elitloppet will be the horse's last performance on the tracks.

Solvalla has one horse ready for the big battle in May and wouldn't it be a big surprise if American-bred Propulsion (Muscle Hill) is one of the earliest invited trotters for the event. Trainer Daniel Redén has announced that Propulsion will race during the spring towards the Elitloppet instead of serving as a stallion.

Gotland's streak ends

Ready Cash son Gotland was undefeated before the 3-year-old trotter's big mission in the $190,000 Criterium des jeunes at Vincennes last Sunday. But when it was the most at stake, Philippe Allaire's horse showed that he wasn't in the best mood for racing.

With a 7-for-7 win streak before the race, Gotland was the first choice in the Criterium des jeunes, but the Ready Cash son made an early break and was out of chances to reach his eighth consecutive victory from his debut.

Instead it was Sébastien Guarato-trained Green Grass (Bold Eagle) who won in mile rate 1:59.3 over 1.7 miles for driver Gabriele Gelormini. The duo hit the lead with 5/8ths of a mile to go and kept attacker Golden Bridge a nose behind at the wire.

Criterium des jeunes replay.

New address for Nadal Broline

Nine-year-old trotter Nadal Broline (Yankee Glide–Aimee's Promise, 1:51.3, $645,900) has won 22 races in 52 starts for trainer Reijo Liljendahl, but from now on, the bronze medalist from last year's Elitloppet will be trained by Björn Goop.

Reijo Liljendahl expressed his thoughts about the move at sullysport.se and explained that it was his decision to let owner Onkel Invest Oy move all 14 horses in his stable.

"Of course this is boring. I've made it to the final of Elitloppet two times (Nadal Broline and Formula One), I've won Breeders Crown in Sweden and I think that I've done a decent job with the horses. But I have strong reasons to act the way I do," he told Sulkysport.

Countdown to bigger Meadowlands purses is on

The condition sheet is out, and everybody who cares about racing at the Meadowlands – be they management, employee, horseperson or bettor – has an awful lot to be excited about.

Beginning Friday, March 1, purses at the Big M – thanks to the recent purse subsidy legislation signed into law by Gov. Phil Murphy – will get a $40,000 per-card boost. Purses will get another $40,000 jolt on March 29. After a Saturday (Feb. 16) night program that saw a 2019-best $3,166,920 in all-source wagering, there is reason for great optimism at the East Rutherford mile oval.

In recent years, the Big M has experienced a lull in horseman interest once the Pennsylvania tracks opened in March, but the playing field has now been leveled with a swipe of Gov. Murphy's pen.

"As far as competing with area tracks for horses," said Big M director of racing Pete Koch, "it certainly puts us back in the ballgame. We paid attention to the non-winners of two, three and four classes, and we've written some races for higher-priced claimers."

On Feb. 9, Castle Flight was claimed by Dylan Davis for $50,000, and he came back one week later to finish second to K Ryan Bluechip in the $21,000 preferred handicap for pacers, a race that five weeks from now will offer a $30,000 purse.

"With the drop off in purses in recent years," said Koch, "the higher-priced claimers have evaporated. With additional funds, we are hoping to bring them back. The $50,000 claim on Castle Flight was probably our highest in six or seven years."

"Carding more straight claimers," said trainer Bob Lounsbury, "it's very interesting to me and a lot of my owners. A lot of my owners just want claiming horses. If we get beat, fine. But then we want the chance to take the winner."

Combining claimers with conditioned horses is tough because the conditioned horses have an advantage.

"I have some guys right now who want to claim a $30,000 or $40,000 horse (a class that is offered on next week's condition sheet). As a matter of fact, I had a couple of owners claim some horses last week. Both said the same thing: 'If there are going to be bigger purses, then we have to claim something.' It might take a couple of weeks to get going, but it should work, and me and my people are going to support the Meadowlands."

It will take not only horseman support but fan participation as well to make this thing work. "With the increased purses, we are encouraging horsemen to race with us," said track chief operating officer and general manager Jason Settlemoir, "because for the supplement to continue into the future, we need to show some handle gains to fulfill some of the parameters of the subsidy. As last weekend proved, bigger fields mean bigger handle, and we have a positive outlook moving forward."

To see the condition sheet, go here.

Not surprisingly, last Saturday's 50-Cent Pick-5 and 50-Cent Pick-4 saw their biggest pools of the year. The Pick-5 saw $79,108 in play while the Pick-4 took $115,218 in action. The month of February has seen a betting bonanza at the industry's handle leader, as all-source total wagering has averaged $2.92 million per program.

Other single-pool highlights from Saturday's card:

- $80,873 Exacta (Race 5)
- $60,966 Trifecta (Race 7)
- $52,199 Win (Race 7)
- $46,974 Superfecta (Race 3)

20-Cent Jackpot Super High-Five fans have a $50,930 carryover to shoot for in Race 5 on Friday's card, when racing resumes at 7:15 p.m. Free program pages for the Pick-4 are available at www.playmeadowlands.com and www.ustrotting.com.

LINEUP CHANGES: Look for some new faces on the small screen as some usual members of the Meadowlands' TV team – Dave Brower, Dave Little and Bob "Hollywood" Heyden – will be in Florida at the Dan Patch Awards dinner.

Tonight (Feb. 22), Harrah's Philadelphia track announcer and one-half of the podcast team of "Posttimewithmikeandmike", Mike Bozich, will serve as co-host of the live "Racing from the Meadowlands" simulcast show. Rich Mattei, the assistant racing secretary at Freehold Raceway, will bring his big-time handicapping skills to TVG's live coast-to-coast presentation of the Meadowlands' races.

Saturday (Feb. 23) will find Bozich in the announcer's booth calling the races as Ken Warkentin serves as host of the show. Occasional fill-in Pete Kleinhans will take another turn as co-host, while the newest member of the Big M's TV team, Jessica Otten, will make her TVG debut.

HANG OUT, BET SPORTS: Fans of sports betting have a new place to watch the games they bet on: the FanDuel Sportsbook Lounge at the Meadowlands. Comfortable seating, dozens of TVs, food and beverage service, and of course, the opportunity to bet on sports events from around the globe. Remember that March Madness is coming! Make your plans to be at the Big M's FanDuel Sportsbook.

BRUNCH FOR DINNER? Tonight (Feb. 22), try a little something different. It's "Brunch for Dinner" at the Big M's Pink Restaurant. It's only $29.95 for a sumptuous all-you-can-eat buffet that is right out of the brunch playbook. For reservations, call 201-THE-BIGM.

Recently enacted legislation adds $1.2 million to NJSS purses in this year and future

The recent passage of legislation providing $20 million in assistance for New Jersey horse racing — both standardbred and thoroughbred — will mean a significant boost to the purse structure for the New Jersey Sire Stakes over the next five years.

"This legislation will supply the New Jersey Sire Stakes with an additional $1.2 million that will be applied to purses for both the Premier Division and the Standardbred Development Fund," said Sire Stakes executive director Chris Castens. "This will allow us to increase our total purse distribution by an estimated 75 per cent over the amount distributed in 2018. There will be across the board increases for each division." Mr. Castens added that "Final purses for divisions in each program will be established later this year."

The New Jersey Sire Stakes operates a two-tiered program for 2- and 3-year-old trotters and pacers. In the spring and early summer the Premier Division, which is limited to horses sired by New Jersey-based stallions, is contested at the Meadowlands. During the late summer and fall attention shifts to Freehold Raceway where the Standardbred Development Fund (SDF) races are contested. SDF races are open to horses sired by New Jersey-based stallions as well as the offspring of any stallion whose dam spends at least 150 days in New Jersey, inclusive of foaling.

USTA proposed drug changes to be vetted at ARCI

Proposals to modify the regulatory policy concerning clenbuterol and betamethasone use in standardbred racing will be one of the major topics considered at the upcoming meeting of the Association of Racing Commissioners International (ARCI) when it meets April 3-5, 2019 in Arcadia,

CA.

The proposed changes were submitted late last year to standardbred regulatory commissions directly from the Harness Racing Medication Collaborative (HRMC), a subcommittee of the United States Trotting Association (USTA), chaired by Joe Faraldo of New York. Several commissions have deferred action on the proposed change pending a recommendation from the ARCI, the umbrella group of the racing regulatory authorities throughout North America and parts of the Caribbean.

The ARCI racing regulatory standards are embodied in its Model Rules of Racing, which form the foundation for the regulation of horse and greyhound racing in North America and, in some cases, beyond.

Several ARCI Committees will consider the proposal, which would liberalize the current policy for these two drugs if adopted. The current policy was adopted by the ARCI upon recommendations that had come from the Racing Medication and Testing Consortium several years ago.

The proposals to change the point at which a violation occurs for each of these drugs if found in a standardbred horse post race will be reviewed by the RCI Scientific Advisory Group, the RCI Standardbred Committee, the Drug Testing Standards and Practices Committee, the Model Rules Committee, and ultimately the entire Membership at the April meeting.

Representatives from the USTA as well as Mr. Faraldo have been invited to attend and have been included on the various agendas to afford them the opportunity to make the case for the proposed policy changes, which would represent breed specific rules for standardbred races.

In the past the ARCI has adopted more stringent breed specific policies for quarter horse races where clenbuterol and albuterol are both considered prohibited at any level. The USTA is requesting a more lenient approach for clenbuterol and betamethasone than what currently exists in the Model Rules.

“The regulators are very interested in hearing what they have to say, including why this policy change is necessary and in the best interest of the horse as well as ensuring the integrity of the race,” said RCI president Ed Martin.

“I think it important to note that standardbred races in Indiana, New Jersey, California, Kentucky, Minnesota, Maryland, and Florida occur consistent with the current Model Rules while other jurisdictions have made exceptions, which is their right. In those jurisdictions that have adopted the Model Rules or are required by statute or rule to implement the Model Rules, compliance has not posed a problem to those who race. That being said, we continually strive to consider any and all information in assessing the appropriateness and applicability of the standards we embody in the Model Rules and are never adverse to modifying a standard if the facts warrant it,” he said.

Information concerning the proposals are posted online at www.arcimodelrules.online.

The World Harness Handicapping Championship presented by DerbyWars.com is a one-day tournament (April 13, 2019), with a welcome reception the evening prior. Players that did not earn a seat through a qualifying event can directly buy-in for $1,300. The $1,300 entry fee includes a $300 bankroll, with the remaining $1,000 going to the prize pool. The $150,000 prize pool is based on an estimated 150 entries. The WHHC contest format requires players to bet 10 races: their choice of seven Meadowlands races, plus three designated mandatory races. Players keep all pari-mutuel winnings. Prize payouts are to the Top 10.

Players can qualify for the WHHC for as low as $33 every night on DerbyWars.com. Saturday (Feb. 23) DerbyWars.com will play host to a WHHC Super-Qualifier with up to five spots gaining entry to the $150,000-estimated WHHC.

Club Hawthorne's weekend qualifiers sent three winners into the WHHC Final. Steven Ginder, Stand Werner and Loretta Yablon will all travel to the Meadowlands on April 13.

Buffalo Raceway and TVG/4NJBets, Tioga Downs, Vernon Downs and Rosecroft are also hosting WHHC Qualifiers. Visit http://playmeadowlands.com/contest\_detail.aspx?id=8240 for a complete qualifier schedule.

HHYF seeking sponsorships

Summer is right around the corner, which means the Harness Horse Youth Foundation is getting ready for another full season of fun with its Trottingbreds – events in Indiana, Ohio, Delaware, Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey are on the schedule with a few more to add.

However, these educational programs require financial support from the industry, so HHYF is actively seeking sponsorships of all kinds in the coming weeks. Funds are needed to purchase a new truck, jog carts and other stable equipment as well as to assist with expenses related to very popular hands-on summer activities. Details are outlined in a new easy-to-read leaflet – please contact the HHYF office if you are interested in discussing how you can help as the organization continues its efforts to share the excitement of standardbreds, harness racing, driving and horses with young people throughout the Midwest and eastern United States.

If you are considering sponsorship, click here to see the 2019 opportunities.

The Harness Horse Youth Foundation has a new mailing address: 2711 Friar Tuck Road, Anderson IN 46013; phone number and email contact information remain the same – phone 317.908.0029 and email ellen@hhyf.org.

The Harness Horse Youth Foundation is a charitable 501(c)3 organization dedicated to providing young people and their families educational opportunities with harness horses in order to foster the next generation of participants and fans. The Foundation has been making a difference in young people's lives since 1976; its programs include interactive learning experiences with racehorses as well as offering scholarships and creating and distributing educational materials relating to harness racing.
