A frank conversation with Adam Bowden

The owner of Diamond Creek Farm burst on the scene in 2005 by spending a million dollars on horses and vowing to play at the top of the game. Adam Bowden has been a fixture among the sport's elites ever since.

It was in November 2005 when an unfamiliar name began appearing on the sales results sheets at the annual Harrisburg sale. The name was Adam Bowden and the horses purchased were not of the cheap variety. For the most part, they were top of the line horses with quality pedigrees.

The total spent was well over a million dollars. It is on occasions such as this that sales managers start to shiver. I know. I've been there. I've also been stung.

It was time to introduce myself to this new buyer. The name Adam Bowden seemed vaguely familiar. I paged him and congratulated him on his purchases and wished him the best of luck with them. Then the touchy question: "How and when are you going to pay for them Adam?" I was told that the money would be wired within a few days. True to his word, that's exactly what transpired. I then remembered who Adam Bowden was. He was a young man who had spent two summers apprenticing at Hanover Shoe Farms attempting to soak up some of what it takes to run a successful horse farm.

Initially, most people, perhaps myself included, thought that he was another newbie who was ready to be taken to the cleaners by the vultures, also known as horse agents. The majority of horse agents are not dishonest or dishonorable. However, the ones who are, are generally the first to try to take advantage of "fresh meat" entering the marketplace.

But contrary to the general assumption, Bowden had done his homework. His ambition was to establish a high quality standardbred breeding farm.

Dave Landry

Adam Bowden at his consignment at the Lexington Selected Yearling Sale in 2016.

Most people entering our business get the horses first and then expand to the point where the need or desire for a place to house them occurs through the progression of time. Adam did it in reverse. He, together with his dad, Chris, had purchased 180 acres of prime real estate in Paris, KY from the late John Magnuson. This was to be the site of Diamond Creek Farm.

Adam came to the breeding game well prepared.

He is from the small town of Cumberland, ME where his parents and grandparents had some cheap horses.

He quickly became smitten with the horse bug. But he didn't want cheap horses. He wanted to play with the big boys at the top of the game.

After graduation from college with a degree in biology and chemistry, he began following the sport with great intensity. He started keeping records and developing theories and a game plan.

First, he felt he had to learn about the physiology of the horse, especially its feet. Growing up, he had often heard the expression "no foot no horse." He spent two years in farrier school working mostly with show horses, but with the occasional standardbred.

After purchasing the land that was to become Diamond

Creek Farm, he needed to stock it with mares. Thus, his trip to the Harrisburg Sale in November 2005. The plan was to buy five mares, concentrating on quality. With only five horses, he wouldn't need help. He could do it all himself.

However at Harrisburg, things got away from him. He left the sale with 20 broodmares, five yearlings and five weanlings.

There was still only Adam to take care of these 30 horses. The yearlings were not an immediate problem as he apportioned them off to trainers who would prepare them to race.

The mares and weanlings were his to take care of. He managed to foal all the mares and raise the then yearlings all by himself.

"It wasn't easy" he said. "But I managed to get through it with a little heartache thrown in, something that affects anybody in the breeding business."

The number of mares that Diamond Creek owns now numbers in the 60 range, although it has been as high as 82. This, together with a group of about 20 retirees and a commensurate number of yearlings and foals, and 32 horses in training, adds up to a very significant equine population.

Adam and I recently had several conversations while he, his wife Lindsay and daughters Finley and Grace were on a skiing expedition in Montana. Their one-year-old son Roman is a little young to be included this time, but I was assured that he will be with them on future trips.

Adam, let's begin with your training stable. You've got 32 horses in training, That's a pretty big investment and speaks well for your confidence in the sport.

"Like most people in this business we're always looking for the home run horse. We own most of them entirely, but we do have partners on some. I'm pretty much of a lone wolf type of personality. I prefer to captain my own ship whether it be for good or bad. It's not that I don't like partners. Everybody that I've partnered with in the business has been "good people." I don't recall ever having a dispute with any of my partners. It's just the I prefer to make all my decisions and not to be beholden to anybody else or have them beholden to me.

"We've taken our racing stable to another dimension in that, like with some thoroughbred outfits, we have our own stable racing manager, Marcus Johansson, who is an outstanding horseman and oversees all of our horses in training. He went to arguably the best school that our sport has, that of Jimmy Takter.

Claus Andersen

Adam and Lindsay Bowden after Pure Country won the Breeders Crown at Harrah's Hoosier Park in 2017.

"I've learned that, generally speaking, horse trainers are among the most optimistic of beasts to be found on this planet. Marcus is able to give us an unbiased opinion of what we have being trained. In addition to having been an accomplished horse trainer, he was also a more than adequate driver. He is able to sit behind our trainees and tell us what he thinks without any bias."

How do you pick your trainers?

"As you know, we have them with several trainers, most of them headquartered in New Jersey. I've tried many trainers and probably as many venues. Most recently I've had a great trainer such as a Jimmy Takter type come to the farms and have him pick the ones he would like to see trained. I don't think there is any perfect way of doing it. However, we've had some recent success doing it this way."

Do you think that having that many horses in training, most of them homebreds hurts you as a market breeder?

"It probably does. But we try to apportion our yearlings into two groups. One of those groups consists of the ones we consider the most commercially attractive. That group goes to the sale. The other group is made up of those from whose dams we have generally put into training. A good many of those in the latter group consists of fillies who's blood we want to retain and build on and keep as future broodmares."

Bowden keeping an eye on the action from the press box at the Lexington Selected Yearling Sale in 2017.

You also dabble in thoroughbreds. How did that come about and how has it worked for you?

“Lindsay and I were in Ireland a few years ago for the Vincent Delaney Memorial. While we were there, we took a trip to Coolmore Stud, arguably the top thoroughbred breeding farm in the world. While we were there, they showed us a list of some mares they might have for sale. We bought two of them. We now own 10 thoroughbred mares. We keep and foal them at Ashford Stud in Lexington, which is Coolmore’s farm in the States. We do raise their foals at our farm in Kentucky with our standardbreds. We utilize agents to sell our yearlings at the select sales. I would say we’ve been fairly successful.”

You mentioned your retirees. Good for you.

“I suppose that I picked that up at Hanover. They have a group that numbers well over a hundred. I remember thinking that’s only right. We benefit from them. It’s only right that when their production years are over that we provide a good home for them. The Crawfords, and I believe Winbak, do much the same.”

You started off with a farm in Kentucky. You’ve now expanded to Pennsylvania and also have had aborted deals in New York and New Jersey.

“An ideal horse farm became available in Pennsylvania. That’s where the best sires stakes and breeders rewards programs were situated so we bought it. It’s where we stand most of the stallions with which we are affiliated. When asked why we moved there, it’s like the celebrated bank robber Willie Sutton said when he was asked why he robbed banks, ‘Because that’s where the money was.’”

In the past years you’ve had plans to establish farms in New York and New Jersey. Neither one came to fruition. What happened?

“In the case of the New York farm, I bear full responsibility. I acted before I polled our customers and assessed the marketplace. We had plans to stand world champion Lather Up there. The feedback I received from our customer base and the industry was that most people were not willing to send their mares, especially mares with foals at their side, to New York because of their stringent residency rules. Rather than risk the chance of the horse not getting the support that one of his ability deserves, we made the decision to stand him at Sugar Valley Farms in Ohio where he serves a full book of mares. In retrospect, I believe Ohio was a better place for him anyway.

“As far as New Jersey is concerned, I'm still not quite sure of what happened. I thought we had reached a deal to stand Tall Dark Stranger there. We had a farm. We had already purchased equipment for the breeding shed. Thankfully, we never made a public announcement before the paperwork was completed. But the word was out through the industry. For reasons I'm still not sure of, I found that the horse was going to Hanover. But that's business. They got him, we didn't. That didn't prevent us from buying a share and booking several mares to him.”

To a great extent, when it comes to going after a top horse to become a stallion there's you and there is Hanover. Most of the others are bit players.

“I think we both have a lot to offer. It depends on the needs of the sellers. If they are looking to realize the most money, especially short term, I believe that we have the most to offer. We have done very well for our shareholders, especially when one considers the money to be made by shipping horses to the Southern Hemisphere.

“Although Hanover has done so on occasion, it's pretty well known that they are reluctant to do it. However in terms of commitment, insofar as the number of mares that they are willing to commit to a horse in its formative years, they have everybody else beat by a country mile.”

Considering the risk factor, you guys are willing to invest significant dollars in a young horse that shows promise early in the game much more than just about anyone.

“That is part of our overall game plan. Sometime it works, other times not as well. I believe it's worth the risk in order to be able to stand the horse if he becomes as good as we hope that he will.”

How active are you in the running of your two farms?

“I would say pretty active. I spend most of my time in Kentucky at the farm there, but I go to the Pennsylvania farm about one week every month. There is nothing of consequence that takes place without my knowing about it. If that makes me a control freak, then I suppose that is what I am.”

You presently own 60 broodmares. Do you anticipate growing much more?

“Not very much. For us, the ideal size is between 60-80 mares. Like everything else in this world, its subject to change. Remember you are speaking with the guy who first went to Harrisburg to buy five mares and left the sale with 30 horses.”

Of all the horses you've owned or been associated with, do you have a favorite?

“Creatine for sure. He overcame all obstacles. He was supposed to be sold as a yearling, but he injured a hock before the sale and had to be withdrawn. From that point forward, he became a physical mess. He lost weight and lacked energy. I remember calling my dad and telling him that it appeared that we might have to put him down. My dad suggested we just kick him out and let nature take its course. ‘Just let him be a horse.’ We brought him in as a 2-year-old and dad suggested that we give him to 80 year old Donnie Richards in Maine to fool with. After awhile, Mr. Richards offered $10,000 for him. We turned it down. A month later, the offer was $50,000. Our answer was the same. ‘This might just be the best horse I’ve ever trained,’ said Richards. We sent him to Bobby Stewart in Kentucky and he won the Kentucky Futurity. We raced him in Europe. He ended up earning over $2 million dollars. He’s now standing at Sugar Valley Farm in Ohio.”

Diamond Creek entered the horse agency business last year. It appears that you have plans to expand it.

“It was somewhat happenstance that we first became involved. We have been friends and partners with Shmuel Farhi who owns Farhi Standardbreds in Canada. It appeared to me as though he and I had similar goals, to play the game at the top and concentrate on quality. Because of COVID-19, they were in a bit of a pickle insofar as sending their help with their consignment to Timonium. We offered to help in acting as their agent. Considering Covid and the circumstances I thought we did really well. I think our crew can represent a horse as well as anyone. We plan to play the agency game the same way we do with our yearlings. We want and will only accept what we consider to be quality horses. We believe we have a top brand and that anybody that’s looking for a good yearling would be remiss in not visiting our consignment.”

Besides horses, what pleases Adam Bowden most?

“Of course, my family is first. Both Lindsay and I love to travel and we do a lot of it. I’m very much into exercise of all sorts. I’m an avid runner. I do the triathlon. I love skiing and biking – just about everything that stretches the body to accomplish a little more.”

BRUSH AND CRUSH

by DEAN TOWERS

Higher minimum bet sizes can help broaden the wagering tent

Two tracks – Mohawk and the Meadowlands – have wagers ripe for change.

by Dean Towers

Back in 2008, I was presenting on a racing panel and was joined by a chap from New Zealand. He talked about the benefits of their fractional wagering, where a customer wagers at whatever denomination they want; even a penny. Five or six years later a variant of this concept spread across North America and we can now bet at 10 or 20 cents as a matter of course.

I have little doubt that lower betting denominations have increased reach, as our New Zealand friend predicted, but has it been good for the player? With a qualifier (there's nothing wrong with offering some lower minimum bets) I believe the answer to that is no.

Harness racing is a formful game, and bettors who sink hours into finding an opinion need a vessel to act on it. Lower minimums water down payoffs, making a lot of effort simply not worth it. In addition, these bets destroy most carryovers, which as we all know act as a benefit to players through reduced takeout.

One track that has interestingly resisted lower minimums has been Northfield Park, where multi-leg wagers are in $1 increments. So far, the results have been encouraging. They have almost weekly carryovers (there's even been a Pick 3 carryover a time or two this meet), and these stoke large handles like the $150,000 Pick 5 pool we played into just this past Tuesday (Feb. 23).

But perhaps more importantly, the payoffs in multi's have been worth getting your handicapping hands dirty for. A horse who would be covered with several 20 cent tickets at a Mohawk Park is sometimes not covered at all at Northfield. Just a few weeks ago, I was alive in a Pick 4 for a pool shot with a completely logical horse in the last leg. This happens almost nightly at the Cleveland oval.

There are currently two bets at two flagship tracks that I think can reap the rewards of higher minimums like Northfield's customers have – Woodbine Entertainment's Pick 4, and the Meadowlands' Super High Five.

At Mohawk Park, the Pick 5 (at a low 20 cent minimum) has been wildly successful for the reasons relayed above – it's a low takeout bet that's tougher to hit with the added 5thleg, resulting in higher payouts. However, the much easier to hit 20 cent Pick 4 is faltering. This bet has higher than average takeout, and runs fairly formful each night, sometimes resulting in comically low 20 cent payouts. This is no secret to Woodbine – they don't even guarantee their Pick 4 pool at $50,000 any longer.

I believe this wager needs a refresh: It should be offered at a $1 minimum, with a drop in takeout. This would attract the bettor who does the work and wants to cash on his or her opinion. It broadens a tent, and now that Woodbine Entertainment allows for carryovers, customers would likely get one from time to time, spurring monster pool size.

Over at the Meadowlands, they too have increased handle by making a tougher to hit bet easier with their 20 cent Pick 5. However, for one wager, they went the opposite direction. The last race Super High Five is 10 cents, not 20 cents. This makes a carryover a unicorn event (there was only one this meet), and the chance at a big score for being right is minimized. I suspect if they increased this minimum to 20 cents we'd see little change in short-term handle, and it would result in a better bet that will, over time, attract more dollars and interest from seasoned horseplayers.

In the business, bet size has been a hot topic with many for and against higher minimums. One thing I believe we all can agree on is that giving customers a choice is accretive. For the casual fans, offering a bet that allows them to spread is important as a marketing vehicle, but we can never forget the everyday horseplayer (or those who want to be one). Giving them a shot at making a score with higher bet size is vital to the health of the game.

Assessing the notion of front-end bias...

... and what the sport can do to diminish it.

by Brett Sturman

Through a prominent driver and a separately prominent trainer, this column has recently touched on the idea of an ever-expanding speed bias in harness racing. At its core, the logic is that horses are faster than ever before, carry their speeds longer, and so it has become extensively more difficult for horses to win from off the pace.

I think that most would accept that premise as more or less correct, including myself. But the fact that horses on the front or ones that race close to the front win more races is not something new; it has always been like that to some degree. When speaking of bias, there is a bias to begin with in harness racing that the better horses traditionally race near the front to begin with. Most times, the race favorites are forwardly placed, so of course it's going to be those horses that are even more likely to win. For example, it seems like every other race at Monticello the track announcer says, "And at the quarter pole, the favorites are running 1-2." Of course they are. It's not happening by accident. In these cases, the bias just as much as anything else is that the better horses are put in more advantageous positions than lesser horses to start with.

The bias is evident even on mile tracks such as the Meadowlands. It's one thing for the favorites to continuously line up on a half-mile track which makes it almost certain no one will come from off the pace to win, but that type of thing isn't supposed to happen on the big tracks.

Fortunately, I'd say that there are ways to combat the bias and have races run fairer. It's a simple concept, too. If there is more early action in races and more aggressive racing tactics are adopted, there won't be as many races where it's impossible for most horses to win halfway through the race. Such was the case at the Meadowlands not too long ago. Even if you buy into the thought that horses carry their speed longer now than they did 20 years ago, the fact remains that 20 years ago at the Meadowlands you could be in first at the quarter and then 10th by the half. Almost never will you see that type of early shuffle today at the Meadowlands, or anywhere else for that matter.

Without that type of action and horses left to stroll along at their own will, of course it's difficult for horses to win from off the pace; especially when coming from off the pace and ceding even further ground when racing wide. But in races where there is activity, it becomes a different story. This can be illustrated to a degree by looking at the last three nights of racing from the Meadowlands (the last two Fridays and last Saturday).

Beginning with Friday, Feb. 19, nine of the 13 races were won by horses on the front, or close to the front by the half-mile mark. In these races, horses were able to be put on the lead fairly comfortably or race up close without expending much energy to be in those positions. In one race that night, a 27-1 horse, Shady McCoy, juked off second-over cover to fair and square overcome the typical bias in a race where the leader tired in the waning stages to finish fourth. There were three other races that weren't won on or close to the front, and in one of those the leader was hard used from post 10 and tired, which set the race up for a 22-1 winner. In another, the leader folded approaching the stretch setting up for the closers which was one by Betalady who surged four-wide at three-quarters, though admittedly she would have been good enough to track down anyone regardless. Another race was won by a 30-1 longshot who never left the inside, found a lane in the stretch and simply had more trot than the tepid favorite who raced on the lead.

Last Saturday the results were similar. In 15 races, by my account 12 of those were won on or close to the front and without the need to race off cover. One exception was the first race, won by a 37-1 horse from post 1 who never left the rail and was able to squeeze up the inside in the stretch in a race where the 3-5 favorite was empty. Race 8 that night saw the even money favorite Gods Spirit N win from a second-over trip where leader had it is own way the front, and race 14 saw Lyons Steel win while making a three-wide move, though in that race the leader had to park out a challenge through a :27.1 second panel.

This past Friday did see more horses winning from off the pace, though most of those races included more movement in the race. The exception to that was in the first race in which a 12-1 chance with Steve Smith tipped off third over cover and tracked down the odds-on favorite that had clear separation. But race two that night was a clear example of what can happen when multiple horses make moves to the front. In that race, there were four lead changes in the first three-eighths and the race set up for the outer flow. Also, that night was another huge rally from Betalady, just as the Friday prior. When you're that good it doesn't matter where you're coming from.

The takeaway from all this is that the more action in a race, the less of a bias there will be. If every race happened to be a GSY Amateur Series race as was the case from the second race on Friday where horses are raced perhaps less cautiously than other races, would there really be as many uncontested leads and one-minute middle fractions? It's not to say that every race needs to be the wild west, but normal racing used to be more aggressive than it is today.

Also, if there is an acknowledgement of the importance of having to race on or close to the front, why aren't there greater pushes or challenges when horses try to get there? Most times the lead is often ceded without much fight, cozy tucks are (not strategically) provided, and the best drivers are often free to do what they want. You'd think with being close-up as a critical component to win, that there should be fights to gain those positions.

Horses are already more capable than they've been of utilizing front-end positioning as a means to win. But it can be combatted by a return to a less passive style of racing.

Fillies lead Indiana's top performers in 2020

May Baby voted Trotter of the Year and Somethingbeautiful voted Pacer of the Year in the Hoosier State for 2020.

by James Platz

The month of February is traditionally when members of Indiana's breeding and racing industry gather to celebrate the best of the previous season. This year, however, the decision was made to forego a formal banquet due to the COVID-19 pandemic. Still, there are many achievements from the 2020 campaign that deserve recognition. Leading the list of honorees are fillies May Baby and Somethingbeautiful, named Trotter of the Year and Pacer of the Year, respectively, in the state of Indiana.

May Baby, the pride of the James Yoder Stable, led all freshman and sophomore trotters in the Hoosier State last season with $271,125 in total earnings. Owned by Yoder's wife, Cheyenne, the Guccio—Free Wheeling filly won seven of 13 starts, including the $270,000 Indiana Sires Stakes Super Final. The Indiana-sired product qualified for the $500,000 Breeders Crown final at Hoosier Park and also ventured outside the state, competing in the $600,000 Hambletonian Oaks. May Baby was bred by Oakwood Farms of Montgomery, IN.

Somethingbeautiful was nearly flawless in her 2020 Indiana campaign. Trained by Dylan Davis, the Always A Virgin—Summer N Sand freshman won eight of 11 starts for owners Howard Taylor, Edwin Gold, Abraham Basin and Richard Lombardo, banking $312,000 while taking a mark of 1:51.4. The 2-year-old won each of six Indiana Sires Stakes legs and triumphed in the $270,000 Super Final. She raced second in the $220,000 Kentuckiana and qualified for the $600,000 Breeders Crown final before finishing eighth.

Grand Swan was recognized as Aged Trotter of the Year after a six-figure campaign capped by an Indiana Sires Stakes Super Final win. The Swan For All—Queen Mum 4-year-old notched three wins last year for the partnership of Never 2 Late Stable, Grand Swan Racing, Bruce Soulsby and Alan Weisenberg, pushing her career bankroll to just over $700,000 and becoming the third-richest offspring of Swan For All. The mare was bred by Larry E. Miller Jr.

Tookadiveoffdipper is the 2020 Aged Pacer of the Year. Collecting just shy of $150,000 in 27 starts last year, the Always A Virgin—Onceinabluemoon gelding registered eight wins for owners Jane Cross and Mark Cross during his 6-year-old campaign, picking up a victory in the ISS Super Final for older male pacers.

Jeff and Maria King's Victory Hill Farm has been named Large Breeder of the Year on the strength of 92 starters that combined to earn just over $1.6 million last season. One of the farm's top products is Little Rocket Man, who equaled Hoosier Park's 1:47.2 all-age track record last season as a 4-year-old. The award is the sixth consecutive for Victory Hill Farm. The LaGrange, IN breeding farm has received the distinction 10 times since 2007.

Aaron Stutzman, who bred Somethingbeautiful, has been named Small Breeder of the Year for 2020. Stutzman and his Goshen-based Luckiana Farm were represented by four starters last year that earned $360,751 in purses, a majority due to the success of the talented freshman.

Always A Virgin and Swan For All, stallions that both stand at Victory Hill, again topped all pacing and trotting sires in the state. It is the sixth time that Always A Virgin has led all pacing stallions. Last season, his progeny accumulated earnings of $5.5 million nationally. From 303 starters, he produced 213 winners that combined for 583 victories. His top Indiana Sires Stakes entries included the aforementioned Somethingbeautiful and fellow 2-year-old Family Recipe ($113,955), as well as 3-year-olds Crook Boyzz ($147,935) and Genie Rockwell ($143,110).

For Swan For All, the award is his fourth consecutive as leading trotting sire in Indiana. He was represented in 2020 by 193 starters nationally, 122 of them winners tallying 303 wins and earnings of $4.1 million. His top Indiana Sire Stakes performers included freshmen Swift Swanda ($237,137) and Brookview Bolt ($171,075) and sophomores Swan In Motion ($214,745) and Rock Swan ($193,291).

Trace Tetrick earned his ninth driving title at Harrah's Hoosier Park, which also secured Pari-Mutuel Driver of the Year honors. Tetrick, now a winner of more than 5,800 career races, finished the 2020 campaign with 277 victories and Somethingbeautiful (LeWayne Miller) was voted Pacer of the Year in the Hoosier State for 2020.

$3.1 million in earnings. Nationally, he scored 436 wins and $4.8 million in purses. This marks the seventh consecutive season he has earned Indiana's top award for drivers.

Tyler George earned his first training title at Hoosier Park last year, and he also garnered Pari-Mutuel Trainer of the Year recognition. He collected 73 wins at Hoosier Park to lead all conditioners. Overall, George sent out 125 winners in 2020 while competing in Indiana and Ohio, and his stable earned just over $1 million in purses.

Racing veteran Jack Myers broke the 11-season stranglehold fellow horseman Don Each held on the Governor's Cup Series Trainer of the Year award, taking the title with 35 trips to the winner's circle. His starters also logged 15 runner-up performances and finished third four times. The Myers-owned and trained J-S Jasper captured a $20,000 Governor's Cup championship last September at the Indiana State Fairgrounds, one of the stable's bigger wins of the campaign. The Stable also sent out divisional champions J-S Siesta Tan and J-S Ivan The Great.

Alex Udell picked up his first Governor's Cup Series Driver of the Year award for his efforts during an abbreviated 2020 Indiana fair season. The Goshen, IN resident won 36 times, finished second on 23 occasions and recorded nine third-place efforts. A long-time employee of Myers' racing stable, Udell collected a majority of his wins driving for the trainer.

The Cumberland Fair will play host to a pari-mutuel meet in 2021.

The Maine attraction

First Tracks Investments puts non-racino plans in motion to replace the loss of Scarborough Downs in Maine with a pari-mutuel meet at at Cumberland Fairgrounds.

by Melissa Keith

When Scarborough Downs held its final live races last November, there was pessimism about where racing was headed in Maine. When the Maine Harness Racing Commission (MHRC) licensed First Tracks Investments, LLC to operate the state's second commercial track, the Feb. 8 approval seemed to secure the sport's future, albeit not in one location. Young entrepreneur Michael Cianchette is leading the company's efforts to create what he termed "a nice, orderly transition for harness racing in Maine, hopefully to get to the point to set up for the next 200 years of what it's going to look like."

Henry Jennings is executive director of the MHRC. He told HRU about the emerging landscape in the local industry.

"We have eight pari-mutuel fairs in Maine, and none of them ran last year," he said, noting that all 2020 fairs were cancelled due to COVID-19 and the Oxford Fair had already discontinued racing years before the pandemic due to rising costs. "Essentially, there are two entities that will operate out of Cumberland [Fairgrounds] next year: The Cumberland Farmers' Club, which owns the property and holds the fair, are going to run their regular meet, COVID willing, in their regular time frame, which is towards the end of September."

The second "entity" is the inaugural meet approved for First Tracks Investments. It is a 56-day pari-mutuel meet slated to run from Saturday, May 8, 2021 through Saturday, July 31, 2021, then take a break to allow the fair season to take place as usual, with a few dates mixed in at Bangor. First Tracks will resume racing Wednesday, Nov. 3, 2021 at Cumberland Fairgrounds, with its last race date of the year set for Dec. 31.

"For the first time since I've been involved, the two commercial tracks will not race at all during the fair season," said a pleased Jennings, correcting himself to mention a few fair-season dates at Bangor that will not conflict with fair dates. "They basically moved all of their racing to fit around the fair season. It's huge, really. There's really not enough horses to have a commercial track going at the same time as a fair track."

Scarborough Downs is completely out of the picture, except as a temporary OTB location doing double-duty as a COVID-19 vaccination site since early February. Wex Inc., a financial services company, has built a 200-square foot office building on the track property; further redevelopment will follow. "That track is not going to be available for racing," confirmed the racing commission representative.

Cianchette comes from a family well known in Maine racing circles. His grandfather, Kenneth Cianchette, worked with brothers Ival "Bud" Cianchette, Chuck, and Carl to transform their father's construction business into a hugely successful enterprise in the 1940s. The 72-year-old company is now 100 per cent worker-owned, evolving from Cianchette Brothers, Inc. to Cianbro Construction, keeping the founders' influence in its name.

Ival "Bud" Cianchette turned to standardbred horses for relaxation in 1962. He converted a family cattle farm in Pittsfield, ME to Chinbro Farm, a standardbred nursery with its own half-mile training track. “Right around the late 1960s, I was interested in encouraging Maine breeding. Before that, Maine had pretty much become a dumping ground for old horses. There was no impetus for people to want to breed and raise horses in Maine,” he told one interviewer. Maine’s standardbred breeding program developed through his work, and his own racing stock helped build its numbers and reputation: Chinbro Knoxvel (p, 4, 1:59.0h; $60,611) became the fastest-ever 2-year-old Maine-bred (p, 2, 2:00.1h at Scarborough Downs) in 1988; S K Hurricane (p, 4, 1:53.0Q; $176,567) became the fastest-ever Maine-bred performer in 1995. Later on, the dedicated horseman served as track president at historic Bass Park (Bangor Raceway) and invested to keep it operational when the track was threatened with closure. He passed away in 2009.

“Can you imagine what would happen if we had Maine horses broadcast all over the world?” asked Michael Cianchette, addressing industry participants at a January 2021 meeting. It’s a contemporary question that echoes Ival Cianchette’s efforts to elevate the Maine industry.

Jennings said that COVID-19 slowed the process a little, but First Tracks is moving ahead. “Michael has been clear about what his intent is, although his ability to follow through on that intent has clearly been hampered by the pandemic,” Jennings said. “His intent is to build a new track, but not at that location [Cumberland]. In fact, he and his dad [Eric] are real estate developers, and they actually had the option to buy Scarborough Downs before, but that option expired and another group got in and snapped up the option underneath them.”

What makes the development one to watch isn’t just that it’s bringing new life to Maine’s standardbred industry. It’s the actual business model, which is not

“He’s not counting on building a casino, because you need legislative approval for that,” explained the MHRC executive director. “His plan is to develop a site that would include a track, but to be much more diversified in what the larger facility would be all about. So, even within the structure of the track, I think they have the idea they might hold concerts; they might hold other types of racing, snowmobile or whatever it is. Long-term, maybe a conference centre, maybe some other pieces related to entertainment or conferences and things like that. So his plan is to develop a complex of sorts that includes a track. The track would be the first piece.”

Michael has publicly stated that he is looking to purchase property in York County, and will be able to “speak more candidly” about the track location once that happens. “The goal would be to secure the land in the next couple of months,” he said in late January.

But no new racetrack was built in a day, or even a pandemic year. That’s where Cumberland Fairgrounds enters the conversation, said Jennings.

“[First Tracks] is basically leasing Cumberland Fairground while the fair is not running, as an interim placeholder to keep the dates and keep the industry critical mass,” Jennings said. “If you lose those dates, then you start to get to a tipping point where things could go south, quickly.”

Maine already faces a battle to retain horses and horsepeople because of a competitive neighbor.

“A lot of people go to Plainridge, but it’s a gruelling day to drive to Plainridge and back with a horse trailer,” Jennings said. “To be a viable industry, we really need a southern Maine track.”

Michael isn’t planning for First Tracks to make a permanent home at Cumberland, but the venue works well until another home is found for the new track.

Maine Harness Horsemen’s Association (MHHA) president Mike Cushing said that with 150 horses stabled there, most of which raced at Scarborough Downs and Plainridge last season, the Fairgrounds is a good place to bridge the gap between Scarborough and a new facility.

“It will be two years [racing at Cumberland], actually, because the company is newly-licensed pari-mutuel,” he said. “They’ve actually been interested in this for several years, but they were only interested in southern Maine and didn’t want to intrude on Scarborough. That property had been sold four, five years now, but we managed to get a couple more years out of it, until it needed to be developed.”

Cushing said that while some horsepeople were reluctant to accept losing Scarborough Downs as a pari-mutuel venue, he’s seen most change their views after Michael’s most recent presentation, conducted via Zoom.

“It is very exciting, and the family that is the primary, First Tracks, the Cianchettes, is a family that is pretty rich into Maine harness racing,” Cushing said. “I think it was Mike’s idea to give this a go, and his father was all on board because they grew up being part of the business. They’ve been very respectful to all of us involved. They actually have a vision of doing things their own way a little bit. We’re enthusiastic, because with all the tracks that have closed since I started at this, the only ones that are ever opened new are because a casino brought them on.”

First Tracks expressed intentions to operate “no casino, no gaming” pari-mutuel harness racing at Cumberland and then at a new location in southern Maine, said the MHHA president.

“Their plan is to make it a tourist destination, or sort of a multi-faceted business, where they want a hotel and a convention centre and they have some other possibilities that they would like to do with it. Harness racing is just the main component, sort of a unique part to the development.”

The future track will likely be 5/8-mile and located not far from Scarborough Downs, in a popular coastal tourism area.

Jennings said that while it won’t be a racino, there will be more than live racing to bet on at the proposed First Tracks facility.

“The simulcast part of it is an important piece for him. I think his vision is to have a very upscale venue that would attract people to the simulcast place,” Jennings said. Then there’s another possibility for on-site wagering: “In front of the legislature is the question about sports wagering that has never made it all the

Jennings added that racing would remain at the forefront of the business, regardless of the legal terrain for sports betting in the state.

“I think the general view is that sports wagering isn’t necessarily a lucrative operation on the wagering side itself, but it is a big draw as far as bringing people to the facility. The vision is an upscale multi-faceted sports bar that’s on a track: When there’s racing there, all the better. When there’s not racing there, you’ve got simulcasting and you’ve got potentially sports betting,” Jennings said.

The dream is for a reimagined standardbred racing attraction, unencumbered by slots and other distractions that commonly do little to build handle. “If you have a facility that in itself is enough to attract patrons, there’s a vision that you can have a successful business that will not necessarily require being subsidized to the level that harness racing is subsidized by casinos, by and large across the country,” said Jennings. “Casinos moved in and essentially took away the wagering dollars that were [previously] relegated to horse racing. That’s certainly the case in Maine.”

While slots have saved the racing game in many jurisdictions, decoupling currently looms large everywhere.

"There's political pressure all the time on that [model]," the MHRC executive director told HRU. "The revenue is taxed against the slot machines in Maine. I don't know how they do it in other states, but slot machines are apparently the biggest part of the take, as far as the casinos go. There's constant political pressure to divert that revenue stream to some other favorite cause. So I think that our strategy is to try to be prepared. The legislature periodically scolds the [harness racing] industry about not becoming more self-sufficient, so I think [the First Tracks project is] all in that vein of trying to be more proactive and looking for new markets."

The Cianchettes have not acted alone, reaching out to the operators of Sacramento, CA's Cal-Expo to find out how to develop a market for the new east coast track's simulcast product. Management company Golden Bear Racing LLC, led by principal Christopher Schick, "runs an operation out there that has no casino money," said Jennings. "They do that by very skillfully positioning their video feed into slots where there's a dearth of horse racing. So what they're trying to do is fill in all the slots where there's nothing to bet on." The Maine version has been dubbed "Black Bear Racing LLC", a nod to a populous and popular animal in the state.

Cushing said that for First Tracks Investments/Black Bear Racing, reaching out to horseplayers (and prospective horseplayers) will mean "a focus on getting back to night racing and things of that nature" so that on-site entertainment and simulcasting both find success.

Back when Lewiston Raceway was Maine's premier racetrack, Cumberland was used to bridge the gap between the race dates scheduled for Lewiston and Scarborough. For the MHA president, temporarily allocating Scarborough's former pari-mutuel dates to the Fairgrounds makes sense. In his view, Cumberland is more than ready: "It's an older grandstand than Scarborough; it's probably half of the size of Scarborough. It is enclosed. The paddock is three buildings that house four races each. It's a really outstanding facility. It's way more than what you need for a fair meet."

First Tracks Investments brings a welcome development on the east coast racing scene. "I race half [my horses] at Plainridge so I can afford to stay in Maine," said Cushing. "It's tough. We're in it more for the passion and the love of the game and a love of horses than we are financial riches, that's for sure. Not all are buying it, but it's not that the world is ending because Scarborough closed. In my opinion, we are in a better place today than we were five years ago. That's kind of a rarity in this sport in North America. I believe we've been afforded an opportunity here, for a new beginning, and I'm quite motivated."

Moving on with a familiar name leading the way could prove a winning equation. It's a departure from the regular racino formula, one that bears watching — and wagering.

SUPERSTAR FEMALES OF HARNESS RACING

with VICTORIA M. HOWARD

Shelley Henry – owner / caretaker

by Victoria Howard

This edition's superstar is a long-time dedicated, hard-working horsewoman who comes from Arthur, ON.

Born in Guelph, ON, a young girl named Shelley Koch would accompany her father, James, a lineman for Ontario Hydro, to the barn to see his several standardbreds that were trained by Mike Schaefer and Jack Powell.

"I think I was around 9 or 10 years old when I'd go with dad to the barn on weekends and attend the races at night when our horses raced in Ontario," Henry said.

"Although my family was not involved in the business other than dad owning some horses, my husband Wayne's family are the ones that really got me involved."

Shelley is talking about the Henry family – one of the most respected names in harness racing.

Ross Henry – the patriarch – was raised on the family farm in Arthur and began his involvement in harness racing in 1965. He was a well-known trainer of what is now Ontario's Signature circuit, having amassed 533 wins and over $7 million in purses.

Ross and his wife, Joyce, raised six children: five sons and a daughter. Two of the sons, Trevor and Wayne, followed their father's footsteps, both becoming successful horsemen of their own.

Sadly, on Dec. 19, 2020, Ross Henry passed away at the age of 91, but his legacy continues.

Courtesy Shelley Henry

Wayne and Shelley Henry.

“I was straight out of high school when I started working on my husband’s family farm, and I’m still there,” Shelley said, laughing.

“Wayne and I met at a race track, of course – where else?

It was Elmira Racetrack where he used to catch drive, plus drive his own. Today, he mainly drives our own horses.

“As a trainer, Wayne has amassed over $7.6 million, and as a driver over $10 million. Not bad, eh?

“He works so hard and always has. We keep enough horses to keep us both busy and as we get older we tire easier. We really enjoy training the babies for it’s so gratifying to see the young horses that we have broke and trained get to the races.

“We’ve been working together for 35 years which is quite a feat in itself.

“Sure, we have our differences in opinions here and there, but who doesn’t?

“We race mainly in Ontario – mostly in the Ontario Sires Stakes and overnight races, but of lately we’ve raced a little at Pompano Park in the winter.

“At the time we have four horses training in Okeechobee, Florida, and one training in Ontario. We also own three broodmares and a yearling.

“We’ve been coming to Okeechobee, Florida, in the winter for the last 25 plus years. It is so much nicer training the younger horses in Florida than the frigid Canadian winters back home. This year, Wayne is helping Gregg McNair in the mornings and I help Ed and Keelan Green, and then Wayne and I do our own horses.

“Over the years we have had some nice horses, such as Independent Lassie, Independent Woman, Tymal Timeout, Lookit, Could It Be Magic, TJ’s Mr Lave, Major Herbie and the list goes on.

“My favorite horse would probably be Could It Be Magic for she had a heart like no other.

“We have won some really nice races, but one that stands out for Wayne and myself was winning the Dream of Glory – a race that’s held in Hanover, Ontario – which is a small home track where a few of Ontario’s leading drivers made their debuts.

“The enthusiasm that night was awesome! The fans in the grandstand were cheering and clapping when our horse Warrawee Promesse returned to the winner’s circle.

It was a very special night, for sure.”

How different is racing in Canada?

Courtesy Shelley Henry

The Henry family have long been fixtures on the Ontario Sires Stakes circuit.

“I think that outside of the locations and weather conditions, harness racing is the same. The horsemen are wonderful, dedicated people that live and breathe the business. In general, most of the horsemen love their horses and treat them as if they were their family,” Shelley said.

“I think Canadian fans and American fans are equally enthusiastic. I’ve been at this for over 40 years and I must say I’ve met so many great people in the business and have had so many nice horses.

“It doesn’t matter to me if the horse is a champion or a cheap claimer – I treat all the horses the same. This is a tough business and we are still at it, so I’m thankful for that.”

The Henrys have a daughter, Nicole, who helps her parents with the horses when she’s not working at a small animal clinic.

Perhaps she is a future veterinarian in the making.

BREAKING STRIDE

with TREY NOSRAC

Your cheating heart - Part 1

by Trey Nosrac

Sunlight warmed my neck as I sat at a picnic table eating a blueberry pancake breakfast on the Brewed Awakening Diner patio.

My pal, David, was seated across the table reading a story in The New York Times on his iPad. He lifted his mirrored sunglasses, heaved a heavy sigh, and said, "The Russians did not invent doping, but they sure made it a national sport. They received a four-year ban from the Olympics and on hosting any international events. Today, the story today is about a high jumper. The athlete went into hiding to avoid testing. The Russian government forged his documents and invented a fictitious hospital with fictitious records to give him cover."

I said, "State-sponsored doping is lame. Russians probably start doping 12-year-old kids to win a luge race in Minsk. I like the good old USA, rugged-individualism."

He said, "The facts in this report are disturbing. Russian cheating is rampant, blatant, and state-sponsored. Every breakthrough in testing that tries to keep pace appears to be a losing game. It's a shame."

He put down his iPad. "I also read about the big horse racing bust by the Feds before the virus lockdowns. Does cheating in harness racing upset you? Is it a deterrent for you? Are you glad they caught the trainers?"

I paused to collect my thoughts. It was a quick collection, "My slant on cheating is that you need to factor it into the equation. I want to believe most people in racing are honest."

"That might be a minority opinion."

"Do some cheat? Of course, a segment of people will always cut corners if they think they can get away with it."

He asked, "How much goes on in horse racing?"

I sighed and admitted, "I may be a know-it-all, but I don't know how much cheating goes down. Juicing horses is a dark hole for schmucks like me. What I DO know is that when you wave money around, a segment of those racing for the money will wave back wearing dark sunglasses and holding needles. No doubt doping and the perception of cheating hurts racing. It eats away at any sport."

"Other sports don't seem to have as much stain."

"Horse racing is an easy target. Horses can't talk. Losers look skeptically at winners in plenty of races, especially when they race amazingly above form. Other sports are grayer."

He tilted his head in confusion.

I asked him, "You follow baseball?"

"Yes."

"In the last full baseball season, the Cleveland Indians battled two teams for a slot in the playoffs – the Minnesota Twins and the Oakland Athletics. The difference at the end of a long season was razor-thin. The Indians came up a couple of wins short of the playoffs. It was the first time they missed the post-season in a long time."

"So?"

"In June of 2019, Oakland A's pitcher Frankie Montas got suspended 80 games for performance-enhancing drug use when he tested positive for Ostarine by Major League Baseball. Montas was 9-2 with a 2.70 ERA and 97 strikeouts when his 'remarkable' season ended."

"In September, Minnesota Twins pitcher, Michael Pineda, received a 60-game suspension after he tested positive for Hydrochlorothiazide, a diuretic outlawed under Major League Baseball's Drug and Prevention Program. At the time of his suspension, Pineda was 11-5."

"What's your point? Major league baseball does a good job in drugs, and they dole out stiff, meaningful sentences?"

"That's half of my point. If we erase the tainted wins by the drug violators in the 2019 baseball season, the Cleveland Indians, with zero violations, would have finished ahead of both the Twins and the A's. Over a 180-game baseball season, this drug cheating becomes blurred, but the annoying fact is that cheaters cheated. Innocent teams suffered and did not receive extra wins to even the standings. The cheating took place over a long season, and you didn't hear any squawking."

"Still missing your point about cheating as it relates to your personal decision to stay or leave the game of harness horse racing."

"I enjoy the game of baseball. The sport has had some rough years in the steroid era, but at this point, they appear to do a solid job policing and penalizing drug offenders using random testing. The union accepts the harsh penalties. Their peers shun cheating players who get busted. Bad apples take their serious medicine and do not lawyer up."

"So, despite your home team getting dinged that season, you stick with baseball?"

"As the 2020 baseball season approached, I had three choices — stop following, continue following, or continue following while accepting that a minimal amount of cheating occurs. Meanwhile, I hope sheriffs with great big badges are empowered and work hard to root out evil. It's the same for me in harness racing, go, stay, or stay with a heavy heart and my eyes open until I reach the tipping point."

"So you play on, knowing that you might be playing a rigged game."

"Games are always rigged to some degree in every sport. Some owners go to post against other owners who agree to the full spa treatment, prerace, postrace, massages, acupuncture, every nick, and ouch tended to on top of their high training bill. Maybe that is fair, maybe not, but it is what it is, and my choice is to play."

He said, "That's not quite the same as EPO or something else injected into a living body."

"True, very true. And a horse doesn't have any say in taking medicine. I guess you could say I try to compensate."

"Compensate?" he asked.

"By playing at harness racing at tracks where in my mind, the field is level or at least leveler, knowing that I will never completely know for sure. I do all kinds of weird mental calisthenics that make me feel better about the dark cloud that never seems to go away."

"But you race on, you still gamble on horses, just like you still follow baseball?"

I nodded, "For now. If the day arrives that the clouds are too dark, Trey will go away."

He was quiet for a few moments, stood up and crammed a twenty-dollar bill under the napkin dispenser, and then said cryptically, "I have an idea. I'll tell you about it next week."

Jeffery P equals The Meadows' 1:51.3 all-age trotting mark

Friday (Feb. 26) at The Meadows turned up dreary with temperatures in the low 40s, hardly the ideal climate for track records. But Jeffery P apparently forgot to watch The Weather Channel. The 6-year-old Full Count-Betty Jean gelding scorched the mile in 1:51.3, matching the all-age track record shared by Lifetime Pursuit and Tall Cotton, who each achieved it in 2014.

Chris Gooden

Jeffery P (Dave Palone) equalled the all-age trotting track record at The Meadows on Friday (Feb. 26) with a 1:51.3 victory.

Jeffery P was away second for Dave Palone before a quick quarter-pole burst gave him the lead. He widened at the three-quarters and accelerated from there, defeating the pocket-sitting Icanflylikeanangel by 3-3/4 lengths, with Lady's Dude third. The winner clicked off fractions of :26.4/ :55.1/ 1:23.1/ 1:51.3.

Ron Burke trains Jeffery P, who now boasts a lifetime bankroll of $215,098, for Burke Racing Stable, Weaver BrusceMI LLC and Phillip Collura.

Palone collected three wins on the 13-race card, giving him nine over the past two programs.

The Super Hi-5, with its jackpot pool fueled by a number of carryovers, was hit, returning $25,959.82. Live racing at The Meadows resumes Wednesday, first post 12:45 p.m.

Last call for Canadian Hall of Fame nominations

The Canadian Horse Racing Hall of Fame (CHRF) invites the public to participate in the nomination of people and horses who have made a significant contribution to Canadian standardbred or thoroughbred horse racing, for induction to the Canadian Horse Racing Hall of Fame in 2021. Nominations are due before 5 p.m. (Eastern) on Wednesday, March 3. The class of 2021 will consist of three standardbred inductees and three thoroughbred inductees. Nominations are requested in the following categories:

- PEOPLE: trainers, drivers, jockeys
- BUILDERS: includes, but not limited to breeders, owners, officials, and others.
- COMMUNICATORS: includes, but not limited to writers, broadcasters, photographers, announcers, bloggers
- VETERAN PERSON & VETERAN HORSE trainers, drivers, jockeys or horses whose careers have been concluded for at least 21 years, but less than 50 years.
- MALE HORSE: stallions or geldings whose contribution to Canadian racing occurred in the past 20 years.
- FEMALE HORSE: mares whose contribution to Canadian racing occurred in the past 20 years.

Details regarding recognition of the ten individuals previously announced as the Class of 2020, as well as the six individuals to be inducted as part of the Class of 2021 will be determined in the coming months. Complete eligibility criteria for each of the categories may be found here.

All nomination submissions to be made using the form provided on the CHRF website available at this link. Please direct questions regarding eligibility or the nomination process to: admin@horseracinghalloffame.com or by calling 416-417-9404

M Life Rewards Ladies & Gents Series kick off stakes action at Yonkers

For the first time in 2021, Yonkers Raceway will play host to stakes action next Tuesday (March 2) and Wednesday (March 3) as the M Life Rewards Ladies and M Life Rewards Gents Series begin. Both events are for 3-year-old and 4-year-old pacers who were non-winners of four races and/or $50,000 through December 1, 2020.

The fillies kick things off on Tuesday night with three $15,000 divisions. Pettycoat Business, a 4-year-old daughter of Art Major who won her Empire Breeders Classic elimination last year and also raced in events like the Breeders Crown and Courageous Lady, has drawn post six in the opening eight-horse grouping (race one), with George Brennan listed to drive for trainer Scott Di Domenico. She meets up with the likes of Even Louder (post three, Jason Bartlett/Nick Devita), a 1:53 winner this year at Pompano Park.

Dragon Roll (post five, Bartlett/Ricky Bucci) heads up the second split in race three. Dragon Roll, a 4-year-old Roll With Joe mare, was a regular on the New York Sire Stakes circuit as a rookie and a sophomore, and has missed the board just once in five starts in 2021, sporting a 1-1-2 record. Her win came at Yonkers in a non-winners of three event on February 17.

The M Life Rewards Ladies Series action for Tuesday concludes in race four. Trainer Ron Burke sends out Turnthefrownaround (post two, Brennan), who, like Dragon Roll, also has a win, a second, and two thirds thus far in her 4-year-old campaign. Another Roll With Joe mare, Turnthefrownaround took a non-winners of four race in gate-to-wire fashion in Westchester on the 17th of February. Somebeachsomefra (post three, Scott Zeron/Deborah Daguet), a 4-year-old daughter of Somebeachsomewhere, has also been performing well with a couple wins from four efforts this year.

Wednesday's M Life Rewards Gents Series will see four divisions go in races one, three, four, and five.

In the first split, just one horse has a victory so far this year, that being 4-year-old Somebeachsomewhere gelding Surfer Beach (post six, Austin Siegelman/Jaymes McAssey), who prevailed in 1:52 4/5 at Dover on January 21, but Scootnroll (post four, Tyler Buter/Todd Buter) went 10-for-17 in the win column in 2020, and the 4-year-old gelding by Roll With Joe will be looking to get back to his victorious ways.

Got The Mojo (post four, Matt Kakaley/Eric Ell), a 4-year-old Sportswriter gelding, posted two victories in three attempts at Dover Downs this year, and in the second section he hooks up with a couple of local winners from 2021 in 4-year-old Rockin Image gelding Odds On Brexit (post one, Tyler Buter/Chris Freck) and Retour Au Jeu (post two, Jordan Stratton/Dennis Laterza), a 4-year-old gelding by He's Watching.

The third division will see a matchup between a couple of sharp horses in Cigar Smoking Tony (post four, Bartlett/Jose Godinez), a 4-year-old son of Art Major, and Lou's Sweetrevenge (post six, Brennan/Burke), a 4-year-old gelded son of Sweet Lou. Cigar Smoking Tony has two wins and a second from three starts in 2021, and Lou's Sweetrevenge sports a record of 2-0-2 from four trips behind the gate.

The final flight is led by 4-year-old Roll With Joe gelding My Pal Joe (post five). Trained and driven by Alek Chartrand, My Pal Joe has three victories, a second, and a third from five starts in 2021. He took a mark of 1:49 4/5 at the Meadowlands on January 2. Dragon Said (post one, Joe Bongiorno/Jenn Bongiorno) and Sweet Truth (post seven, Zeron/Thomas Corelli) have also won races this year.

The M Life Rewards Ladies and M Life Rewards Gents Series both have a total of three preliminary legs. The Ladies final is slated for Tuesday, March 23, with the Gents final the following night.

Both next Tuesday's and Wednesday's 10-race cards at Yonkers get underway at 7:15 p.m.

Meanwhile, the Pick 6 on Friday night (Feb. 26) started out with 42-1 shot Rock On Precious pulling an upset. That took out many tickets, and after 8-1 Lindsey's Pride knocked off 2-5 favorite Stormy Kromer in the $30,000 open handicap trot in the penultimate leg, no one remained alive going into the final race in the sequence.

As a result of Friday's Pick 6 wager not being hit, there will be a $6,790.37 carryover on Monday night's (March 1) card, and the pool will have a guarantee of $15,000. The guaranteed pool in the Pick 6 is offered as part of the United States Trotting Association's Strategic Wagering Program, and free past performances will be available here.

Yonkers Raceway's Pick 6 has a takeout rate of 20 per cent, as do the nightly Pick 4 and Pick 5.

Monday night's 10-race card begins at 7:15 p.m.

The Raceway changes post time

Management at The Raceway at Western Fair District would like to notify horsepeople and customers of a post time change for all cards at the half-mile oval.

Effective Tuesday, March 2, the Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday cards at The Raceway will begin at 6:30 p.m.

The change is due to unprecedented mild temperatures during this time of the year.

The post time will be in effect until March 29 when post times will revert to 5:50 p.m. on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and 4:50 p.m. on Fridays.

Management would also like to express a sincere appreciation to all associations for the quick approval and turnaround time regarding this change.

Tioga Downs 2021 racing information

Live harness racing will make its return to Upstate New York this spring with Tioga Downs preparing to kick off the 2021 live racing season on Saturday, May 1. Racing will follow a Friday and Saturday evening, Sunday matinee schedule covering 59 dates until Sept. 25.

With the casino operational and revenue projected to return to pre-COVID levels, the purses for the 2021 season will be close to the 2019 levels. It is our hope that live attendance and on-site wagering will be permitted during the racing.

The Southern Tier Harness Horseman's Association (STHHA) plans to reinstate the stabling incentive program.

Tioga Downs offers stabling at no cost to horsemen and the stall/racing applications are currently available on the web. They should be completed in full, signed and returned by March 25.

Questions may be directed to racing operations manager Brett Risi at (607) 699-7688 or STHHA president Guy Howard at (607) 765-7168.

2021 Ohio Stakes Guide corrections

There are several corrections to 2021 Ohio Stakes Guide.

On page 3 in the Chronological Scheduled for the Ohio Sire Stakes, the correction location is Eldorado Scioto Downs.

On page 44 on the Ohio Fair Colt Stakes Schedule Grid, the 2-year-old filly pace and trot and the 3-year-old filly pace and trot at Oak Harbor will be raced on July 19.

Also, the Knox County Fair at Mt. Vernon was omitted. The dates are July 24 for the 2-year-old colt pace, the 2-year-old filly pace, the 3-year-old colt trot, and the 3-year-old filly pace. On July 26, the 2-year-old colt trot, the 2-year-old filly trot, the 3-year-old colt pace, and the 3-year-old fill trot will be contested.

A corrected version of the 2021 Ohio Staking Guide is available on-line at OHHA.com.

Pocono's higher-level Game of Claims Series final prelims

On Monday morning (March 1), horsepeople at The Downs at Mohegan Sun Pocono will be checking with the Downs' racing office to confirm that their horses – most of them new barn members after Saturday's (Feb. 27) third and final preliminary round of the Game Of Claims Pacing Series – had enough points to make their rich finals on Saturday, March 6, and they likely will also be checking the availability of driver Anthony Napolitano, who had six wins Saturday, five in claiming preliminaries.

The horses entered in the section of the Series for $25,000-base price horses saw Melanie's Tedy become the prelim point leader by virtue of a 1:54.3 triumph over sloppy going, joining Glengarry Knight N and Horsing Around as two-time winners in this class. Glengarry Knight N was second-leading point earner – and Horsing Around, despite his double victories, did not even rank in the top nine horses in the totals, as he skipped the first week, and now has to hope for defections to get in the $50,000 Championship.

The possibility of defections is why everyone will focus on the draw for this Championship so much, in two ways: the series' rules say no owner or trainer can have more than two horses in any single Game Of Claims Championship, and seven out of the top point earners were claimed on Saturday. The unofficial early listing of the top nine is Melanie's Tedy, Glengarry Knight N, Iammbrightside N, Captain Nash, Apex Seelster, Union Station and American Rebel (tie), and A Real Miracle and Mississippi Rabbit (tie); Tullow N and Horsing Around are "on the bubble." (Check with the Pocono Race Office for the official final totals). Only three of Saturday's seven winners are preliminarily on the Championship list; trainer Darren Taneyhill sent out three winners (all guided by ANap), but only Union Station has a decent chance to return.

The "landing strip" for the $30,000 Championship for $15,000-base price horses is a little bit less congested, as on Saturday Sunset Braydon and Royal Heart (the 2020 series winner for this price) posted their second victories in this class, joining Fernando as two-time winners, and that trio ranking 1-2-3 in points from first-named to last. Royal Heart will get to stay with trainer Travis Alexander for another week after being haltered out of the first two legs, but he is one of only two out of the top nine point winners in this class who was not claimed on Saturday.

The unofficial early ranking for this group is Sunset Braydon, Royal Heart, Fernando, Busboy Hanover and Thisjetsabookin (tie), Cash Is King, Just Plain Loco, and Polak A and Shoreview (tie); Best Trick Ever and White Hair Rocks are the AEs.

Obviously the claiming box was rocking and rolling again on Saturday, with 20 horses taken for $537,500 in advance of these finals, bringing the season totals to 117 claims for $2,220,375.

And that's after just five cards of the 2021 season. Those figures should be added to on Sunday, when the final preliminary for $10,000- and $7500-base price horses will be conducted during a 5 p.m. card, with program pages available at <https://www.phha.org/downsmppps.html>

The doctrine of proportionality

For many years I trained my own horses and never had a violation of any kind. Therefore, I never paid much attention to the penalty system for rules violations. In the last few years, I have placed my horses with a trainer. He recently had a violation for banamine over the acceptable limit.

He administered the banamine to my horse 24 hours prior to racing. He was racing in an unfamiliar jurisdiction and they had recently changed the acceptable pre-race time from 24 hours to 48 hours. The trainer should have known of that change and accepts complete responsibility for the violation. It was a mistake without intent and before the trainer became aware of his mistake three of his horses had violations.

The order of penalty read that because the trainer was not made aware of the first violation prior to subsequent violations, these mitigating circumstances will cause him only to be penalized for the first violation. This was a $500 fine and forfeiture of his trainer fee. That seems to be reasonable, and I am glad for the trainer that he had a reduced penalty. However, the mitigating circumstances did not apparently apply to the owners, as all were ordered to forfeit their winner's share of the purse. I spoke with the presiding judge and he really had no explanation for why the mitigating circumstances did not apply to the owners, other than that in all cases owners are ordered to forfeit their purse money. The judge also stated that he did not believe that the presence of banamine affected the outcome of the race. I understand and agree with the imposition of penalties on owners to discourage them from placing horses with unethical and cheating trainers. In this case, the trainer was neither unethical nor intended to cheat, he made a mistake.

In most sports and in a court of law, a doctrine of proportionality generally applies when imposing penalties for violations. The penalty shall be proportional to the severity of the violation. In football, off-sides results in a 5-yard penalty, holding results in a 10-yard penalty, and a personal foul results in a 15-yard penalty. Additionally, if it is a flagrant foul it could result in ejection from the game. This is an example of the doctrine of proportionality where penalties are proportional to the violation.

In some racing jurisdictions, but not all, the penalty for the trainer is somewhat minor for a banamine violation but could certainly be much more severe for some of the other zero-tolerance drug violations. That of course is how it should be and is in accordance with the doctrine of proportionality. However, the penalty for owners seems to be in all cases at the same high level, regardless of the severity of the violation. The penalty is the forfeiture of the purse. That certainly is not proportional.

This isn't just about me and my bad luck. I have repaid my purse money and it is a done deal, unlikely to ever affect me again. Beyond me personally is the sport that I have been passionate about for nearly all my 83 years. We continue to be a challenged industry and it has always been an objective to expand the owner base. Do other owners and prospective new owners perceive this as fair and equitable treatment? Shouldn't we apply the doctrine of proportionality in assessing penalties on owners.
